TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE

ROBERT

EARL OF

Sunderland,

My Lord

SInce I cannot promiſe you much of Poetry in my Play, 'tis but reaſonable that I ſhou'd ſecure you from any part of it in my Dedication. And indeed I cannot better diſtinguiſh the exactneſs of your taſte from that of other men, than by the plainneſs and ſincerity of my Addreſs. I muſt keep my Hyperboles in reſerve for men of other underſtandings: An hungry Appetite after praiſe: and a ſtrong digeſtion of it, will bear the groſsneſſe of that diet: But one of ſo criticall a judgement as your Lordſhip, who can ſet the bounds of juſt and proper in every ſubject, would give me ſmall encouragement for ſo bold an undertaking. I more than ſuſpect, my Lord, that you wou'd not do common Juſtice to your ſelf: and therefore, were I to give that Character of you, which I think you truly merit, I wou'd make my appeal from your Lordſhip to the Reader, and wou'd juſtify my ſelf from flattery by the publique voice, whatever proteſtation you might enter to the contrary. But I find I am to take other meaſures with your Lordſhip; I am to ſtand upon my guard with you, and to approach you as warily as Horace did Auguſtus.

Cui male si palpere, recalcitrat undique tutus.

An ill tim'd, or an extravagant commendation, wou'd not pass upon you: but you wou'd keep off such a Dedicator at arms end; and send him back with his Encomiums, to this Lord, or that Lady, who stood in need of such triffling merchandise. You see, my Lord, what an awe you have upon me, when I dare not offer you that incense, which wou'd be acceptable to other Patrons: but am forc'd to curb my self, from ascribing to you those honours, which even an Enemy cou'd not deny you. Yet I must confess I never practis'd that virtue of moderation (which is properly your Character) with so much reluctancy as now. For it hinders me from being true to my own knowledge, in not witnessing your worth; and deprives me of the only means which I had left to shew the world that true honour and unintersted respect which I have always payed you. I would say somewhat, if it were possible, which might distinguish that veneration I have for you, from the flatteries of those who adore your fortune. But the eminence of your condition, in this particular, is my unhappiness: for it renders whatever I would say suspected. Professions of Service, submissions, and attendance, are the practise of all men to the great: and commonly they who have the least sincerity, perform them best; as they who are least ingag'd in love, have their tongues the freest to counterfeit a passion: for my own part, I never cou'd shake off the rustique bashfulness which hangs upon my nature; but valluing my self, at as little as I am worth, have been affraid to render even the common duties of respect to those who are in power. The Ceremonious visits which are generally payed on such occasions, are not my tallent. They may be real even in Courtiers; but they appear with such a face of interest, that a modest man wou'd think himself in danger of having his sincerity mistaken for his design. My congratulations keep their distance, and pass no farther than my heart. There it is, that I have all the joy imaginable when I see true worth rewarded; and virtue uppermost in the world.

If therefore there were one to whom I had the honour to be known; and to know him so perfectly, that I could say without flattery, he had all the depth of understanding that was requisite in any able Statesman, and all that honesty which commonly is wanting; that he was brave without vanity, and knowing without positiveness: that he was loyall to his Prince, and a lover of his Country; that his principles were full of moderation, and all his Councils such as tended to heal and not to widen the breaches of the Nation: that in all his conversation there appear'd a native candour, and a desire of doing good in all his actions; if such an

an one whom I have describ'd, were at the helm, if he had risen by his merits, and were chosen out in the necessity and pressure of affairs, to remedy our confusions by the seasonableness of his advice, and to put a stop to our ruine, when we were just rowling downward to the precipice, I shou'd then congratulate the Age in which I liv'd, for the common safety; I should not despair of the Republique though Hannibal were at the gates; I should send up my vows for the success of such an action as Virgil did on the like occasion for his Patron, when he was raising up his country from the desolations of a civill war.

Hunc saltem everso juvenem succurrere seclo,
Ne superi prohibete.

I know not whether I am running, in this extasy which is now upon me: I am almost ready to reassume the ancient rights of Poetry; to point out, and Prophecy the man, who was born for no lesse an undertaking: and whom posterity shall blesse for its accomplishment. Methinks I am already taking fire from such a Character, and making room for him, under a borrow'd name amongst the Heroes of an Epique Poem. Neither could mine, or some more happy Genius, want encouragement under such a Patron.

Pollio amat nostram, quamvis sit rustica Musam.

But these are considerations afar off my Lord: the former part of the Prophecy must be first accomplish'd: the quiet of the nation must be secur'd; and a mutuall trust, betwixt Prince and people be renew'd: and then this great and good man will have leisure for the ornaments of peace: and make our language as much indebted to his care, as the French is to the memorie of their famous Richelieu. You know My Lord, how low he lay'd the foundations of so great a work: That he began it with a Grammar and a Dictionary; without which all those Remarques and Observations, which have since been made, had been perform'd to as little purpose as it wou'd be to consider the furniture of the Rooms before the contrivance of the House. Propriety must first be stated, ere any measures of elegance can be taken. Neither is one Vaugelas sufficient for such a work. 'Twas the employment of the whole Academy for many years, for the perfect knowledge of a Tongue, was never attain'd by any single person. The Court, the Colledge, and the Town, must be joyn'd in it. And as our English is a composition of the dead and living Tongues, there is requir'd a perfect

perfect knowledge, not onely of the Greek and Latine, but of the Old German, the French and the Italian : and to help all these, a conversation with those Authours of our own, who have written with the fewest faults in prose and verse. But how barbarously we yet write and speak, your Lordship knows, and I am sufficiently sensible in my own English. For I am often put to a stand, in considering whether what I write be the Idiom of the Tongue, or false Grammar, and nonsence couch'd beneath that specious Name of Anglicisme. And have no other way to clear my doubts, but by translating my English into Latine, and thereby trying what sence the words will bear in a more stable language. I am desirous if it were possible, that we might all write with the same certainty of words and purity of phrase, to which the Italians first arriv'd, and after them the French : At least that we might advance so far, as our Tongue is capable of such a standard. It wou'd mortify an English man to consider, that from the time of Boccace and of Petrarche, the Italian has varied very little : And that the English of Chaucer their contemporary is not to be understood without the help of an Old Dictionary. But their Goth and Vandall had the fortune to be graffed on a Roman stock : Ours has the disadvantage, to be founded on the Dutch. We are full of Monosyllables, and those clog'd with consonants, and our pronunciation is effeminate. All which are enemies to a sounding language : 'Tis true that to supply our poverty, we have trafficqued with our Neighbour Nations ; by which means we abound as much in words, as Amsterdam does in Religions ; but to order them, and make them usefull after their admission is the difficulty. A greater progress has been made in this, since his Majesties return, then perhaps since the conquest to his time. But the better part of the work remains unfinish'd : And that which has been done already, since it has only been in the practise of some few writers, must be digested into Rules and Method ; before it can be profitable to the General. Will your Lordship give me leave to speak out at last ? and to acquaint the world, that from your encouragement and patronage, we may one day expect to speak and write a language, worthy of the English wit, and which foreigners may not disdain to learn. Your birth, your Education, your naturall endowments, the former Employments which you have had abroad, and that which to the joy of good men you now exercise at home, seem all to conspire to this design : the Genius of the Nation seems to call you out as it were by name, to polish and adorn your native language, and to take from it the reproach of its barbarity. 'Tis upon this encouragement that I have adventur'd tur'd on the following Critique, which I humbly present you together with the Play : In which, though I have not had the leisure, nor indeed the encouragement to proceed to the Principal Subject of it, which is the words and thoughts that are sutable to Tragedie ; yet the whole discourse has a tendency that way, and is preliminary to it. In what I have already done, I doubt not but I have contradicted some of my former opinions, in my loose Essays of the like nature : but of this, I dare affirm, that it is the fruit of my riper age and experience, and that self-love, or envy have no part in it. The application to English Authours is my own, and therein perhaps I may have err'd unknowingly : But the foundation of the rules is reason, and the authority of those living Critiques who have had the honour to be known to you abroad, as well as of the Ancients, who are not lesse of your acquaintance. Whatsoever it be, I submit it to your Lordships Judgment, from which I never will appeal, unlesse it be to your good nature, and your candour. If you can allow an hour of leisure to the perusal of it, I shall be fortunate that I cou'd so long entertain you ; if not, I shall at least have the satisfaction to know, that your time was more usefully employ'd upon the publique. I am,

My Lord,

Your Lordships most Obedient

Humble Servant,

John Dryden.

The PREFACE to the Play.

THE Poet Æschylus was held in the same veneration by the Athenians of after Ages as Shakespear is by us; and Longinus has judg'd, in favour of him, that he had a noble boldnesse of expression, and that his imaginations were lofty and Heroick: but on the other side Quintilian affirms, that he was daring to extravagance. 'Tis certain, that he affected pompous words, and that his sence too often was obscur'd by Figures: Notwithstanding these imperfections, the value of his Writings after his decease was such, that his Countrymen ordain'd an equal reward to those Poets who could alter his Plays to be Acted on the Theater, with those whose productions were wholly new, and of their own. The case is not the same in England; though the difficulties of altering are greater, and our reverence for Shakespear much more just, then that of the Grecians for Æschylus. In the Age of that Poet, the Greek tongue was arriv'd to its full perfection; they had then amongst them an exact Standard of Writing, and of Speaking: The English Language is not capable of such a certainty; and we are at present so far from it, that we are wanting in the very Foundation of it, a perfect Grammar. Yet it must be allow'd to the present Age, that the tongue in general is so much refin'd since Shakespear's time, that many of his words, and more of his Phrases, are scarce intelligible. And of those which we understand some are ungrammatical, others course; and his whole stile is so pester'd with Figurative expressions, that it is as affected as it is obscure. 'Tis true, that in his later Plays he had worn off somewhat of the rust; but the Tragedy which I have undertaken to correct, was, in all probability, one of his first endeavours on the Stage.

The Original story was Written by one Lollius a Lombard, in Latin verse, and Translated by Chaucer into English: intended I suppose a Satyr on the Inconstancy of Women: I find nothing of it among the Ancients; not so much as the name once Cressida mention'd. Shakespear, (as I hinted) in the Aprenticeship of his Writing, model'd it into that Play, which is now call'd by the name of Troilus and Cressida; but so lamely is it left to us, that it is not divided into Acts: which fault I ascribe to the Actors, who Printed it after Shakespear's death; and that too, so carelessly, that a more uncorrect Copy I never saw. For the Play it self, the Author seems to have begun it with some fire; the Characters of Pandarus and Thersites, are promising enough; but as if he grew weary of his task, after an Entrance or two, he lets 'em fall: and the later part of the Tragedy is nothing but a confusion of Drums and Trumpets, Excursions and Alarms. The chief persons, who give name to the Tragedy, are left alive: Cressida is false, and is not punish'd. Yet after all, because the Play was Shakespear's, and that there appear'd in some places of it, the admirable Genius of the Author; I undertook to remove that heap of Rubbish, under which many excellent thoughts lay wholly bury'd. Accordingly, I new model'd the Plot; threw out many unnecessary persons; improv'd those Characters racters which were begun, and left unfinish'd: as Hector, Troilus, Pandarus and Thersites; and added that of Andromache. After this, I made with no small trouble, an Order and Connexion of all the Scenes; removing them from the places where they were inartificially set: and though it was impossible to keep 'em all unbroken, because the Scene must be sometimes in the City, and sometimes in the Camp, yet I have so order'd them that there is a coherence of 'em with one another, and a dependence on the main design: no leaping from Troy to the Grecian Tents, and thence back again in the same Act; but a due proportion of time allow'd for every motion. I need not say that I have refin'd his Language, which before was obsolete; but I am willing to acknowledg, that as I have often drawn his English nearer to our times, so I have sometimes conform'd my own to his: & consequently, the Language is not altogether so pure, as it is significant. The Scenes of Pandarus and Cressida, of Troilus and Pandarus, of Andromache with Hector and the Trojans, in the second Act, are wholly New: together with that of Nestor and Ulysses with Thersites; and that of Thersites with Ajax and Achilles. I will not weary my Reader with the Scenes which are added of Pandarus and the Lovers, in the Third; and those of Thersites, which are wholly alter'd: but I cannot omit the last Scene in it, which is almost half the Act, betwixt Troilus and Hector. The occasion of raising it was hinted to me by Mr. Betterton: the contrivance and working of it was my own. They who think to do me an injury, by saying that it is an imitation of the Scene betwixt Brutus and Cassius, do me an honour, by supposing I could imitate the incomparable Shakespear: but let me add, that if Shakespears Scene, or that faulty Copy of it in Amintor and Melantius had never been, yet Euripides had furnish'd me with an excellent example in his Iphigenia, between Agamemnon and Menelaus: and from thence indeed, the last turn of it is borrow'd. The occasion which Shakespear, Euripides, and Fletcher, have all taken, is the same; grounded upon Friendship: and the quarrel of two virtuous men, rais'd by natural degrees, to the extremity of passion, is conducted in all three, to the declination of the same passion; and concludes with a warm renewing of their Friendship. But the particular groundwork which Shakespear has taken, is incomparably the best: Because he has not only chosen two the greatest Heroes of their Age; but has likewise interested the Liberty of Rome, and their own honors, who were the redeemers of it, in this debate. And if he has made Brutus who was naturally a patient man, to fly into excess at first; let it be remembred in his defence, that just before, he has receiv'd the news of Portia's death: whom the Poet on purpose neglecting a little Chronology, supposes to have dy'd before Brutus, only to give him an occasion of being more easily exasperated. Add to this, that the injury he had receiv'd from Cassius, had long been brooding in his mind; and that a melancholy man, upon consideration of an affront, especially from a Friend, would be more eager in his passion, than he who had given it, though naturally more cholerick. Euripides whom I have follow'd, has rais'd the quarrel betwixt two Brothers, who were friends. The foundation of the Scene was this: The Grecians were wind-bound at the Port of Aulis, and the Oracle had said, that they could not

Sail, unleſs Agamemnon deliver'd up his Daughter to be Sacrific'd: he refuſes; his Brother Menelaus urges the publick ſafety, the Father defends himſelf, by arguments of natural affection, and hereupon they quarrel. Agamemnon is at laſt convinc'd, and promiſes to deliver up Iphigenia, but ſo paſſionately laments his loſs, that Menelaus is griev'd to have been the occaſion of it, and by a return of kindneſs, offers to intercede for him with the Grecians, that his Daughter might not be ſacrific'd. But my friend Mr. Rymer has ſo largly, and with ſo much judgement deſcrib'd this Scene, in comparing it with that of Melantius and Amintor, that it is ſuperfluous to ſay more of it: I only nam'd the heads of it, that any reaſonable man might judge it was from thence I model'd my Scene betwixt Troilus and Hector. I will conclude my reflexions on it, with a paſſage of Longinus, concerning Plato's imitation of Homer: 'We ought not to regard a good imitation as a theft; but as a beautifull 'Idea of him who undertakes to imitate, by forming himſelf on the invention and 'the work of another man; for he enters into the liſts like a new wreſtler, to diſ-'pute the prize with the former Champion. This ſort of emulation ſays Heſiod, 'is honourable Ἀγαθὴ δ' ἔρις ἥδε βροτοῖσιν---When we combat for Victory with 'a Hero, and are not without glory even in our overthrow. Thoſe great men 'whom we propoſe to our ſelves as patterns of our imitation, ſerve us as a Torch, 'which is lifted up before us, to enlighten our paſſage; and often elevate our 'thoughts as high, as the conception we have of our Authors Genius.

I have been ſo tedious in three Acts, that I ſhall contract my ſelf in the two laſt. The beginning Scenes of the fourth Act are either added, or chang'd wholly by me; the middle of it is Shakeſpear alter'd, and mingled with my own, three or four of the laſt Scenes are altogether new. And the whole Fifth Act, both the Plot and the Writing are my own Additions.

But having written ſo much for imitation of what is excellent, in that part of the Preface which related only to my ſelf; methinks it would neither be unprofitable nor unpleaſant to enquire how far we ought to imitate our own Poets, Shakeſpear and Fletcher in their Tragedies: And this will occaſion another enquiry, how thoſe two Writers differ between themſelves: but ſince neither of theſe queſtions can be ſolv'd unleſs ſome meaſures be firſt taken, by which we may be enabled to judge truly of their Writings: I ſhall endeavour as briefly as I can, to diſcover the grounds and reaſon of all Criticiſm, applying them in this place only to Tragedy. Ariſtotle with his Interpreters, and Horace, and Longinus, are the Authors to whom I owe my lights; and what part ſoever of my own Plays, or of this, which no mending could make regular, ſhall fall under the condemnation of ſuch Judges, it would be impudence in me to defend. I think it no ſhame to retract my errors, and am well pleas'd to ſuffer in the cauſe, if the Art may be improv'd at my expence: I therefore proceed to,

The Grounds of Criticiſm in Tragedy.

Tragedy is thus defin'd by Ariſtotle, (omiting what I thought unneceſſary in his Definition.) 'Tis an imitation of one intire, great, and probable action; not told but repreſented, which by moving in us fear and pity, is conducive conducive to the purging of those two passions in our minds. More largly thus, Tragedy describes or paints an Action, which Action must have all the proprieties above nam'd. First, it must be one or single, that is, it must not be a History of one Mans life: Suppose of Alexander the Great, or Julius Cæsar, but one single action of theirs. This condemns all Shakespears Historical Plays, which are rather Chronicles represented, than Tragedies, and all double action of Plays. As to avoid a Satyr upon others, I will make bold with my own Marriage-A-la-Mode, where there are manifestly two Actions, not depending on one another: but in Oedipus there cannot properly be said to be two Actions, because the love of Adrastus and Euridice has a necessary dependance on the principal design, into which it is woven. The natural reason of this Rule is plain, for two different independant actions, distract the attention and concernment of the Audience, and consequently destroy the intention of the Poet: If his business be to move terror and pity, and one of his Actions be Comical, the other Tragical, the former will divert the people, and utterly make void his greater purpose. Therefore as in Perspective, so in Tragedy, there must be a point of sight in which all the lines terminate: Otherwise the eye wanders, and the work is false. This was the practice of the Grecian Stage. But Terence made an innovation in the Roman: all his Plays have double Actions; for it was his custome to Translate two Greek Comedies, and to weave them into one of his, yet so, that both the Actions were Comical; and one was principal, the other but secondary or subservient. And this has obtain'd on the English Stage, to give us the pleasure of variety.

As the Action ought to be one, it ought as such, to have Order in it, that is, to have a natural beginning, a middle, and an end: A natural beginning says Aristotle, is that which could not necessarily have been plac'd after another thing, and so of the rest. This consideration will arraign all Plays after the new model of Spanish Plots, where accident is heap'd upon accident, and that which is first might as reasonably be last: an inconvenience not to be remedyed, but by making one accident naturally produce another, otherwise 'tis a Farce, and not a Play. Of this nature, is the Slighted Maid; where there is no Scene in the first Act, which might not by as good reason be in the fifth. And if the Action ought to be one, the Tragedy ought likewise to conclude with the Action of it. Thus in Mustapha, the Play should naturally have ended with the death of Zanger, and not have given us the grace Cup after Dinner, of Soliman's divorce from Roxolana.

The following properties of the Action are so easy, that they need not my explaining. It ought to be great, and to consist of great Persons, to distinguish it from Comedy; where the Action is trivial, and the persons of inferior rank. The last quality of the action is, that it ought to be probable, as well as admirable and great. 'Tis not necessary that there should be Historical truth in it; but always necessary that there should be a likeness of truth, something that is more then barely possible, probable being that which succeeds or happens oftner than it misses. To invent therefore a probability, and to make it wonderfull, is the most difficult undertaking in the Art of Poetry: for that which is not won-derfull, is not great, and that which is not probable, will not delight a reasonable Audience. This action thus describ'd, must be represented and not told, to distinguish Dramatic Poetry from Epic: but I hasten to the end, or scope of Tragedy; which is to rectify or purge our passions, fear and pity.

To instruct delightfully is the general end of all Poetry: Philosophy instructs, but it performs its work by precept: which is not delightfull, or not so delightfull as Example. To purge the passions by Example, is therefore the particular instruction which belongs to Tragedy. Rapin a judicious Critic, has observ'd from Aristotle, that pride and want of commiseration are the most predominant vices in Mankinde: therefore to cure us of these two, the inventors of Tragedy, have chosen to work upon two other passions, which are fear and pity. We are wrought to fear, by their seting before our eyes some terrible example of misfortune, which hapned to persons of the highest Quality; for such an action demonstrates to us, that no condition is privileg'd from the turns of Fortune: this must of necessity cause terror in us, and consequently abate our pride. But when we see that the most virtuous, as well as the greatest, are not exempt from such misfortunes, that consideration moves pity in us: and insensibly works us to be helpfull to, and tender over the distress'd, which is the noblest and most God-like of moral virtues. Here 'tis observable, that it is absolutely necessary to make a man virtuous, if we desire he should be pity'd: We lament not, but detest a wicked man, we are glad when we behold his crimes are punish'd, and that Poetical justice is done upon him. Euripides was censur'd by the Critics of his time, for making his chief characters too wicked: for example, Phædra though she lov'd her Son-in-law with reluctancy, and that it was a curse upon her Family for offending Venus; yet was thought too ill a pattern for the Stage. Shall we therefore banish all characters of villany? I confess I am not of that opinion; but it is necessary that the Hero of the Play be not a Villain: that is, the characters which should move our pity ought to have virtuous inclinations, and degrees of morall goodness in them. As for a perfect character of virtue, it never was in Nature; and therefore there can be no imitation of it: but there are allays of frailty to be allow'd for the chief Persons, yet so that the good which is in them, shall outweigh the bad; and consequently leave room for punishment on the one side, and pity on the other.

After all, if any one will ask me, whether a Tragedy cannot be made upon any other grounds, than those of exciting pity and terror in us? Bossu, the best of modern Critics, answers thus in general: That all excellent Arts, and particularly that of Poetry, have been invented and brought to perfection by men of a transcendent Genius; and that therefore they who practice afterwards the same Arts, are oblig'd to tread in their footsteps, and to search in their Writings the foundation of them: for it is not just that new Rules should destroy the authority of the old. But Rapin writes more particularly thus: That no passions in a story are so proper to move our concernment as Fear and Pity; and that it is from our concernment we receive our pleasure, is undoubted; when the Soul becomes agitated with fear for one character, or hope for another; then it is that we are pleas'd in Tragedy, by the interest which we take in their adventures.

Here

Here therefore the general answer may be given to the first question, how far we ought to imitate Shakespear and Fletcher in their Plots; namely that we ought to follow them so far only, as they have Copy'd the excellencies of those who invented and brought to perfection Dramatic Poetry: these things only excepted which Religion, customs of Countries, Idioms of Languages, &c. have alter'd in the Superstructures, but not in the foundation of the design.

How defective Shakespear and Fletcher have been in all their Plots, Mr. Rymer has discover'd in his Criticisms: neither can we, who follow them, be excus'd from the same or greater errors; which are the more unpardonable in us, because we want their beauties to counterveil our faults. The best of their designs, the most approaching to Antiquity, and the most conducing to move pity, is the King and no King; which if the Farce of Bessus were thrown away, is of that inferior sort of Tragedies, which end with a prosperous event. 'Tis probably deriv'd from the story of OEdipus, with the character of Alexander the Great, in his extravagancies, given to Arbaces. The taking of this Play, amongst many others, I cannot wholly ascribe to the excellency of the action; for I finde it moving when it is read: 'tis true, the faults of the Plot are so evidently prov'd, that they can no longer be deny'd. The beauties of it must therefore lie either in the lively touches of the passions: or we must conclude, as I think we may, that even in imperfect Plots, there are less degrees of Nature, by which some faint emotions of pity and terror are rais'd in us: as a less Engine will raise a less proportion of weight, though not so much as one of Archimedes making; for nothing can move our nature, but by some natural reason, which works upon passions. And since we acknowledge the effect, there must be something in the cause.

The difference between Shakespear and Fletcher in their Plotting seems to be this, that Shakespear generally moves more terror, and Fletcher more compassion: For the first had a more Masculine, a bolder and more fiery Genius; the Second a more soft and Womanish. In the mechanic beauties of the Plot, which are the Observation of the three Unities, Time, Place, and Action, they are both deficient; but Shakespear most. Ben. Johnson reform'd those errors in his Comedies, yet one of Shakespear's was Regular before him: which is, The Merry Wives of Windsor. For what remains concerning the design, you are to be refer'd to our English Critic. That method which he has prescrib'd to raise it from mistake, or ignorance of the crime, is certainly the best though 'tis not the only: for amongst all the Tragedies of Sophocles, there is but one, OEdipus, which is wholly built after that model.

After the Plot, which is the foundation of the Play, the next thing to which we ought to apply our Judgment is the manners, for now the Poet comes to work above ground: the ground-work indeed is that which is most necessary, as that upon which depends the firmness of the whole Fabric; yet it strikes not the eye so much, as the beauties or imperfections of the manners, the thoughts and the expressions.

The first Rule which Bossu, prescribes to the Writer of an Heroic Poem, and which holds too by the same reason in all Dramatic Poetry, is to make the moral

moral of the work; that is, to lay down to your self what that precept of morality shall be, which you would insinuate into the people: as namely, Homer's, (which I have Copy'd in my Conquest of Granada ) was, that Union preserves a Common-wealth, and discord destroys it. Sophocles, in his OEdipus, that no man is to be accounted happy before his death. 'Tis the Moral that directs the whole action of the Play to one center; and that action or Fable, is the example built upon the moral, which confirms the truth of it to our experience: when the Fable is design'd, then and not before, the Persons are to be introduc'd with their manners, characters and passions.

The manners in a Poem, are understood to be those inclinations, whether natural or acquir'd, which move and carry us to actions, good, bad, or indifferent in a Play; or which incline the persons to such, or such actions: I have anticipated part of this discourse already, in declaring that a Poet ought not to make the manners perfectly good in his best persons, but neither are they to be more wicked in any of his characters, than necessity requires. To produce a Villain, without other reason than a natural inclination to villany, is in Poetry to produce an effect without a cause: and to make him more a Villain than he has just reason to be, is to make an effect which is stronger then the cause.

The manners arise from many causes: and are either distinguish'd by complexion, as choleric and phlegmatic, or by the differences of Age or Sex, of Climates, or Quality of the persons, or their present condition: they are likewise to be gather'd from the several Virtues, Vices, or Passions, and many other common-places which a Poet must be suppos'd to have learn'd from natural Philosophy, Ethics, and History; of all which whosoever is ignorant, does not deserve the Name of Poet.

But as the manners are usefull in this Art, they may be all compris'd under these general heads: First, they must be apparent, that is in every character of the Play, some inclinations of the Person must appear: and these are shown in the actions and discourse. Secondly the manners must be suitable or agreeing to the Persons; that is, to the Age, Sex, dignity, and the other general heads of Manners: thus when a Poet has given the Dignity of a King to one of his persons, in all his actions and speeches, that person must discover Majesty, Magnanimity, and jealousy of power; because these are suitable to the general manners of a King. The third property of manners is resemblance; and this is founded upon the particular characters of men, as we have them deliver'd to us by relation or History: that is, when a Poet has the known character of this or that man before him, he is bound to represent him such, at least not contrary to that which Fame has reported him to have been: thus it is not a Poets choice to make Ulysses choleric, or Achilles patient, because Homer has describ'd 'em quite otherwise. Yet this is a Rock, on which ignorant Writers daily split: and the absurdity is as monstrous, as if a Painter should draw a Coward running from a Battle, and tell us it was the Picture of Alexander the Great.

The last property of manners is, that they be constant, and equal, that is, maintain'd the same through the whole design: thus when Virgil had once given the name of Pious to Æneas, he was bound to show him such, in all his words words and actions through the whole Poem. All these properties Horace has hinted to a judicious observer. 1. Notandi sunt tibi mores, 2. aut famam sequere, 3. aut sibi convenientia finge. 4. Servetur ad imum, qualis ab incæpto processerat, & sibi constet.

From the manners, the Characters of persons are deriv'd, for indeed the characters are no other than the inclinations, as they appear in the several persons of the Poem. A character being thus defin'd, that which distinguishes one man from another. Not to repeat the same things over again which have been said of the manners, I will only add what is necessary here. A character, or that which distinguishes one man from all others, cannot be suppos'd to consist of one particular Virtue, or Vice, or passion only; but 'tis a composition of qualities which are not contrary to one another in the same person: thus the same man may be liberal and valiant, but not liberal and covetous; so in a Comical character, or humour, (which is an inclination to this, or that particular folly.) Falstaff is a lyar, and a coward, a Glutton, and a Buffon, because all these qualities may agree in the same man; yet it is still to be observ'd, that one virtue, vice, and passion, ought to be shown in every man, as predominant over all the rest: as covetousness in Crassus, love of his Country in Brutus; and the same in characters which are feign'd.

The chief character or Hero in a Tragedy, as I have already shown, ought in prudence to be such a man, who has so much more in him of Virtue than of Vice, that he may be left amiable to the Audience, which otherwise cannot have any concernment for his sufferings: and 'tis on this one character that the pity and terror must be principally, if not wholly founded. A Rule which is extreamly necessary, and which none of the Critics that I know, have fully enough discover'd to us. For terror and compassion work but weakly, when they are divided into many persons. If Creon had been the chief character in OEdipus, there had neither been terror nor compassion mov'd; but only detestation of the man and joy for his punishment; if Adrastus and Euridice had been made more appearing characters, then the pity had been divided, and lessen'd on the part of OEdipus: but making OEdipus the best and bravest person, and even Jocasta but an underpart to him; his virtues and the punishment of his fatall crime, drew both the pity, and the terror to himself.

By what had been said of the manners, it will be easy for a reasonable man to judge, whether the characters be truly or falsely drawn in a Tragedy; for if there be no manners appearing in the characters, no concernment for the persons can be rais'd: no pity or horror can be mov'd, but by vice or virtue, therefore without them, no person can have any business in the Play. If the inclinations be obscure, 'tis a sign the Poet is in the dark, and knows not what manner of man he presents to you; and consequently you can have no Idea, or very imperfect, of that man: nor can judge what resolutions he ought to take; or what words or actions are proper for him: Most Comedies made up of accidents, or adventures, are liable to fall into this error: and Tragedies with many turns are subject to it: for the manners never can be evident, where the surprises of Fortune take up all the business of the Stage; and where the Poet is more in pain, to tell you what hapned to such a man, than what he was. 'Tis one of the excellencies of Shakespear, that the manners of his persons are generally apparent; and you see their bent and inclinations. Fletcher comes far short of him in this, as indeed he does almost in every thing: there are but glimmerings of manners in most of his Comedies, which run upon adventures: and in his Tragedies, Rollo, Otto, the King and No King, Melantius, and many others of his best, are but Pictures shown you in the twi-light; you know not whether they resemble vice, or virtue, and they are either good bad, or indifferent, as the present Scene requires it. But of all Poets, this commendation is to be given to Ben. Johnson, that the manners even of the most inconsiderable persons in his Plays are every where apparent.

By considering the Second quality of manners, which is that they be sutable to the Age, Quality, Country, Dignity, &c. of the character, we may likewise judge whether a Poet has follow'd Nature. In this kinde Sophocles and Euripides, have more excell'd among the Greeks than Æschylus: and Terence, more then Plautus among the Romans: Thus Sophocles gives to OEdipus the true qualities of a King, in both those Plays which bear his Name: but in the latter which is the OEdipus Colonœus, he lets fall on purpose his Tragic Stile, his Hero speaks not in the Arbitrary tone; but remembers in the softness of his complaints, that he is an unfortunate blind Old-man, that he is banish'd from his Country, and persecuted by his next Relations. The present French Poets are generally accus'd, that wheresoever they lay the Scene, or in whatsoever Age, the manners of their Heroes are wholly French: Racin's Bajazet is bred at Constantinople; but his civilities are convey'd to him by some secret passage, from Versailles into the Seraglio. But our Shakespear, having ascrib'd to Henry the Fourth the character of a King, and of a Father, gives him the perfect manners of each Relation, when either he transacts with his Son, or with his Subjects. Fletcher, on the other side gives neither to Arbaces, nor to his King in the Maids Tragedy, the qualities which are sutable to a Monarch: though he may be excus'd a little in the latter; for the King there is not uppermost in the character; 'tis the Lover of Evadne, who is King only, in a second consideration; and though he be unjust, and has other faults which shall be nameless, yet he is not the Hero of the Play: 'tis true we finde him a lawfull Prince, (though I never heard of any King that was in Rhodes) and therefore Mr. Rymers Criticism stands good; that he should not be shown in so vicious a character. Sophocles has been more judicious in his Antigona for though he represent in Creon a bloody Prince, yet he makes him not a lawful King, but an Usurper, and Antigona her self is the Heroin of the Tragedy: But when Philaster wounds Arethusa and the Boy; and Perigot his Mistress, in the faithfull Shepherdess, both these are contrary to the character of Manhood: Nor is Valentinian manag'd much better, for though Fletcher has taken his Picture truly, and shown him as he was, an effeminate voluptuous man, yet he has forgotten that he was an Emperor, and has given him none of those Royal marks, which ought to appear in a lawfull Successor of the Throne. If it be enquir'd, what Fletcher should have done on this occasion; ought he not to have represented Valentinian as he was? Bossu shall answer this question for me, by an instance of the like nature: Mauritius the Greek Emperor, was a Prince far short of Valentinian, for he was indued with many Kingly virtues; he was Religious, Mercifull, and Valiant, but withall he was noted of extream covetousness, a vice which is contrary to the character of a Hero, or a Prince: therefore says the Critic, that Emperor was no fit person to be represented in a Tragedy, unless his good qualities were only to be shown, and his covetousness (which sullyed them all) were slur'd over by the artifice of the Poet. To return once more to Shakespear; no man ever drew so many characters, or generally distinguished 'em better from one another, excepting only Johnson: I will instance but in one, to show the copiousness of his Invention; 'tis that of Caliban, or the Monster in the Tempest. He seems there to have created a person which was not in Nature, a boldness which at first sight would appear intolerable: for he makes him a Species of himself, begotten by an Incubus on a Witch; but this as I have elsewhere prov'd, is not wholly beyond the bounds of credibility, at least the vulgar stile believe it. We have the separated notions of a spirit, and of a Witch; (and Spirits according to Plato, are vested with a subtil body; according to some of his followers, have different Sexes) therefore as from the distinct apprehensions of a Horse, and of a Man, Imagination has form'd a Centaur, so from those of an Incubus and a Sorceress, Shakespear has produc'd his Monster. Whether or no his Generation can be defended, I leave to Philosophy; but of this I am certain, that the Poet has most judiciously furnish'd him with a person, a Language, and a character, which will suit him, both by Fathers and Mothers side: he has all the discontents, and malice of a Witch, and of a Devil; besides a convenient proportion of the deadly sins; Gluttony, Sloth, and Lust, are manifest; the dejectedness of a slave is likewise given him, and the ignorance of one bred up in a Desart Island. His person is monstrous, as he is the product of unnatural Lust; and his language is as hobgoblin as his person: in all things he is distinguish'd from other mortals. The characters of Fletcher are poor & narrow, in comparison of Shakespears; I remember not one which is not borrow'd from him; unless you will except that strange mixture of a man in the King and no King: So that in this part Shakespear is generally worth our Imitation; and to imitate Fletcher is but to Copy after him who was a Copyer.

Under this general head of Manners, the passions are naturally included, as belonging to the Characters. I speak not of pity and of terror, which are to be mov'd in the Audience by the Plot; but of Anger, Hatred, Love, Ambition, Jealousy, Revenge, &c. as they are shown in this or that person of the Play. To describe these naturally, and to move them artfully, is one of the greatest commendations which can be given to a Poet: to write pathetically, says Longinus, cannot proceed but for a lofty Genius. A Poet must be born with this quality; yet, unless he help himself by an acquir'd knowledg of the Passions, what they are in their own nature, and by what springs they are to be mov'd, he will be subject either to raise them where they ought not to be rais'd, or not to raise them by the just degrees of Nature, or to amplify them beyond the natural bounds, or not to observe the crisis and turns of them, in their cooling and decay: all which errors proceed from want of Judgment in the Poet, and from being unskill'd in the Principles of Moral Philosophy. Nothing is more frequent in a Fanciful Writer, than to foil himself by not managing his strength: therefore, as in a Wrestler, there is first requir'd some measure of force, a well-knit body, and active Limbs, without which all instruction would be vain; yet, these being granted, if he want the skill which is necessary to a Wrestler, he shall make but small advantage of his natural robustuousness: So in a Poet, his inborn vehemence and force of spirit, will only run him out of breath the sooner, if it be not supported by the help of Art. The roar of passion indeed may please an Audience, three parts of which are ignorant enough to think all is moving which is noise, and it may stretch the lungs of an ambitious Actor, who will dye upon the spot for a thundring clap; but it will move no other passion than indignation and contempt from judicious men. Longinus, whom I have hitherto follow'd, continues thus: If the passions be Artfully employ'd, the discourse becomes vehement and lofty; if otherwise, there is nothing more ridiculous than a great passion out of season: And to this purpose he animadverts severely upon Æschylus, who writ nothing in cold blood, but was always in a rapture, and in fury with his Audience: the Inspiration was still upon him, he was ever tearing it upon the Tripos; or (to run off as madly as he does, from one similitude to another) he was always at high flood of Passion, even in the dead Ebb, and lowest Watermark of the Scene. He who would raise the passion of a judicious Audience, says a Learned Critic, must be sure to take his hearers along with him; if they be in a Calm, 'tis in vain for him to be in a huff: he must move them by degrees, and kindle with 'em; otherwise he will be in danger of setting his own heap of Stubble on a fire, and of burning out by himself without warming the company that stand about him. They who would justify the madness of Poetry from the Authority of Aristotle, have mistaken the text, & consequently the Interpretation: I imagine it to be false read, where he says of Poetry, that it is Εὐφυῆς ἢ μανικῆ, that it had always somewhat in it either of a genius, or of a madman. 'Tis more probable that the Original ran thus, that Poetry was Εὐφυῆς ὁ μανικῆ, That it belongs to a Witty man, but not to a madman. Thus then the Passions, as they are consider'd simply and in themselves, suffer violence when they are perpetually maintain'd at the same height; for what melody can be made on that Instrument all whose strings are screw'd up at first to their utmost stretch, and to the same sound? But this is not the worst; for the Characters likewise bear a part in the general calamity, if you consider the Passions as embody'd in them: for it follows of necessity, that no man can be distinguish'd from another by his discourse, when every man is ranting, swaggering, and exclaiming with the same excess: as if it were the only business of all the Characters to contend with each other for the prize at Billingsgate; or that the Scene of the Tragedy lay in Bet'lem. Suppose the Poet should intend this man to be Cholerick, and that man to be patient; yet when they are confounded in the Writing, you cannot distinguish them from one another: for the man who was call'd patient and tame, is only so before he speaks; but let his clack be set a going, and he shall tongue it as impetuously, impetuously, and as loudly as the errantest Hero in the Play. By this means, the characters are only distinct in name; but in reality, all the men and women in the Play are the same person. No man should pretend to write, who cannot temper his fancy with his Judgment: nothing is more dangerous to a raw horse-man, than a hot-mouth'd Jade without a curb.

'Tis necessary therefore for a Poet, who would concern an Audience by describing of a Passion, first to prepare it, and not to rush upon it all at once. Ovid has judiciously shown the difference of these two ways, in the speeches of Ajax and Ulysses: Ajax from the very beginning breaks out into his exclamations, and is swearing by his Maker.——Agimus proh Jupiter inquit. Ulysses on the contrary, prepares his Audience with all the submissiveness he can practice, & all the calmness of a reasonable man; he found his Judges in a tranquillity of spirit, and therefore set out leasurely and softly with 'em, till he had warm'd 'em by degrees; and then he began to mend his pace, and to draw them along with his own impetuousness: yet so managing his breath, that it might not fail him at his need, and reserving his utmost proofs of ability even to the last. The success you see was answerable; for the croud only applauded the speech of Ajax;——

Vulgique secutum ultima murmur erat:——

But the Judges awarded the prize for which they contended to Ulysses.

Mota manus Procerum est, et quid facundia possit
Tum patuit, fortisque viri arma Disertus.

The next necessary rule is to put nothing into the discourse which may hinder your moving of the passions. Too many accidents as I have said, incomber the Poet, as much as the Arms of Saul did David; for the variety of passions which they produce, are ever crossing and justling each other out of the way. He who treats of joy and grief together, is in a fair way of causing neither of those effects. There is yet another obstacle to be remov'd, which is pointed Wit, and Sentences affected out of season; these are nothing of kin to the violence of passion: no man is at leisure to make sentences and similes, when his soul is in an Agony. I the rather name this fault, that it may serve to mind me of my former errors; neither will I spare myself, but give an example of this kind from my Indian Emperor: Montezuma, pursu'd by his enemies, and seeking Sanctuary, stands parlying without the Fort, and describing his danger to Cydaria in a simile of six lines;

As on the sands the frighted Traveller
Sees the high Seas come rowling from afar, &c.

My Indian Potentate was well skill'd in the Sea for an Inland Prince, and well improv'd since the first Act, when he sent his son to discover it. The Image had not been amiss from another man, at another time: Sed nunc non erat hisce locus: he destroy'd the contentment which the Audience might otherwise have had for him; for they could not think the danger near, when he had the leisure to invent a Simile.

If Shakespear be allow'd, as I think he must, to have made his Characters distinct, it will easily be infer'd that he understood the nature of the Passions: because it has been prov'd already, that confus'd passions make undistinguishable ſhable Characters: yet I cannot deny that he has his failings; but they are not ſo much in the paſſions themſelves, as in his manner of expreſſion: he often obſcures his meaning by his words, and ſometimes makes it unintelligible. I will not ſay of ſo great a Poet, that he diſtinguiſh'd not the blown puffy ſtile, from true ſublimity; but I may venture to maintain that the fury of his fancy often tranſported him, beyond the bounds of Judgment, either in coyning of new words and phraſes, or racking words which were in uſe, into the violence of a Catachreſis: 'Tis not that I would explode the uſe of Metaphors from paſſions, for Longinus thinks 'em neceſſary to raiſe it; but to uſe 'em at every word, to ſay nothing without a Metaphor, a Simile, an Image, or deſcription, is I doubt to ſmell a little too ſtrongly of the Buskin. I muſt be forc'd to give an example of expreſſing paſſion figuratively; but that I may do it with reſpect to Shakeſpear, it ſhall not be taken from any thing of his: 'tis an exclamation againſt Fortune, quoted in his Hamlet, but written by ſome other Poet.

Out, out, thou ſtrumpet fortune; all you Gods,
In general Synod, take away her Power,
Break all the ſpokes and fallyes from her Wheel,
And bowl the round Nave down the hill of Heav'n
As low as to the Fiends.

And immediately after, ſpeaking of Hecuba, when Priam was kill'd before her eyes:

The mobbled Queen ran up and down,
Threatning the flame with biſſon rheum: a clout about that head,
Where late the Diadem ſtood; and for a Robe
About her lank and all o're-teemed loyns,
A blanket in th' alarm of fear caught up.
Who this had ſeen, with tongue in venom ſteep'd
'Gainſt Fortune's ſtate would Treaſon have pronounc'd;
But if the Gods themſelves did ſee her then,
When ſhe ſaw Pyrrhus make malicious ſport
In mincing with his ſword her Husband's Limbs,
The inſtant burſt of clamor that ſhe made
(Unleſs things mortal meant them not at all)
Would have made milch the burning eyes of Heav'n,
And paſſion in the Gods.

What a pudder is here kept in raiſing the expreſſion of triffling thoughts. Would not a man have thought that the Poet had been bound Prentice to a Wheel-wright, for his firſt Rant? and had follow'd a Ragman, for the clout and blanket, in the ſecond? Fortune is painted on a wheel; and therefore the writer in a rage, will have Poetical Juſtice done upon every member of that

that Engin: after this execution, he bowls the Nave downhill, from Heaven, to the Fiends: (an unreasonable long mark a man would think;) 'tis well there are no solid Orbs to stop it in the way, or no Element of fire to consume it: but when it came to the earth, it must be monstrous heavy, to break ground as low as to the Center. His making milch the burning eyes of Heaven, was a pretty tollerable flight too; and I think no man ever drew milk out of eyes before him: yet to make the wonder greater, these eyes were burning. Such a sight indeed were enough to have rais'd passion in the Gods, but to excuse the effects of it, he tells you perhaps they did not see it. Wise men would be glad to find a little sence couch'd under all those pompous words; for Bombast is commonly the delight of that Audience, which loves Poetry, but understands it not: and as commonly has been the practice of those Writers, who not being able to infuse a natural passion into the mind, have made it their business to ply the ears, and to stun their Judges by the noise. But Shakespear does not often thus; for the passions in his Scene between Brutus and Cassius are extreamly natural, the thoughts are such as arise from the matter, and the expression of 'em not viciously figurative. I cannot leave this Subject before I do justice to that Divine Poet, by giving you one of his passionate descriptions: 'tis of Richard the Second when he was depos'd, and led in Triumph through the Streets of London by Henry of Bullingbrook: the painting of it is so lively, and the words so moving, that I have scarce read any thing comparable to it, in any other language, Suppose you have seen already the fortunate Usurper passing through the croud, and follow'd by the shouts and acclamations of the people; and now behold King Richard entring upon the Scene: consider the wretchedness of his condition, and his carriage in it; and refrain from pity if you can.

As in a Theatre, the eyes of men
After a well-grac'd Actor leaves the Stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious:
Even so, or with much more contempt, mens eyes.
Did scowl on Richard: no man cry'd God save him:
No joyful tongue gave him his welcom home,
But dust was thrown upon his Sacred head,
Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,
His face still combating with tears and smiles
(The badges of his grief and patience)
That had not God (for some strong purpose) steel'd
The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,
And Barbarism it self have pity'd him.

To speak justly of this whole matter; 'tis neither height of thought that is discommended, nor pathetic vehemence, nor any nobleness of expression in its proper place; but 'tis a false measure of all these, something which is like 'em, and is not them: 'tis the Bristol-stone, which appears like a Diamond; 'tis an extravagant thought, instead of a sublime one; 'tis roaring madness in- stead

ſtead of vehemence; and a ſound of words, inſtead of ſence. If Shakeſpear were ſtript of all the Bombaſt in his paſſions, and dreſs'd in the moſt vulgar words, we ſhould find the beauties of his thoughts remaining; if his embroideries were burnt down, there would ſtill be ſilver at the bottom of the melting-pot: but I fear (at leaſt, let me fear it for my ſelf) that we who Ape his ſounding words, have nothing of his thought, but are all out-ſide; there is not ſo much as a dwarf within our Giants cloaths. Therefore, let not Shakeſpear ſuffer for our ſakes; 'tis our fault, who ſucceed him in an Age which is more refin'd, if we imitate him ſo ill, that we coppy his failings only, and make a virtue of that in our Writings, which in his was an imperfection.

For what remains, the excellency of that Poet was, as I have ſaid, in the more manly paſſions; Fletcher's in the ſofter: Shakeſpear writ better betwixt man and man; Fletcher, betwixt man and woman: conſequently, the one deſcrib'd friendſhip better; the other love: yet Shakeſpear taught Fletcher to write love; and Juliet, and Deſdemona, are Originals. 'Tis true, the Scholar had the ſofter ſoul; but the Maſter had the kinder. Friendſhip is both a virtue, and a Paſſion eſſentially; love is a paſſion only in its nature, and is not a virtue but by Accident: good nature makes Friendſhip; but effeminacy Love. Shakeſpear had an Univerſal mind, which comprehended all Characters and Paſſions; Fletcher a more confin'd, and limited: for though he treated love in perfection, yet Honour, Ambition, Revenge, and generally all the ſtronger Paſſions, he either touch'd not, or not Maſterly. To conclude all; he was a Limb of Shakeſpear.

I had intended to have proceeded to the laſt property of manners, which is, that they muſt be conſtant; and the characters maintain'd the ſame from the beginning to the end; and from thence to have proceeded to the thoughts and expreſſions ſutable to a Tragedy: but I will firſt ſee how this will reliſh with the Age. 'Tis I confeſs but curſorily written; yet the Judgment which is given here, is generally founded upon Experience: But becauſe many men are ſhock'd at the name of Rules, as if they were a kinde of Magiſterial preſcription upon Poets, I will conclude with the words of Rapin, in his reflections on Ariſtotle's work of Poetry: If the Rules be well conſider'd: we ſhall find them to be made only to reduce Nature into Method, to trace her ſtep by ſtep, and not to ſuffer the leaſt mark of her to eſcape us: 'tis only by theſe, that probability in Fiction is maintain'd, which is the Soul of Poetry: they are founded upon good Sence, and Sound Reaſon, rather than on Authority; for, though Ariſtotle and Horace are produc'd, yet no man muſt argue, that what they write is true, becauſe they writ it; but 'tis evident, by the ridiculous miſtakes and groſs abſurdities, which have been made by thoſe Poets who have taken their Fancy only for their guide, that if this Fancy be not regulated, 'tis a meer caprice, and utterly incapable to produce a reaſonable and judicious Poem.

The Prologue Spoken by Mr. Betterton, Repreſenting the Ghoſt of Shakeſpear.

SEE, my lov'd Britons, ſee your Shakeſpeare riſe,
An awfull ghoſt confeſs'd to human eyes!
Unnam'd, methinks, diſtinguiſh'd I had been
From other ſhades, by this eternal green,
About whoſe wreaths the vulgar Poets ſtrive,
And with a touch, their wither'd Bays revive.
Untaught, unpractis'd, in a barbarous Age,
I found not, but created firſt the Stage.
And, if I drain'd no Greek or Latin ſtore,
'Twas, that my own abundance gave me more.
On foreign trade I needed not rely
Like fruitfull Britain, rich without ſupply.
In this my rough-drawn Play, you ſhall behold
Some Maſter-ſtrokes, ſo manly and ſo bold
That he, who meant to alter, found 'em ſuch
He ſhook; and thought it Sacrilege to touch.
Now, where are the Succeſſours to my name?
What bring they to fill out a Poets fame?
Weak, ſhort-liv'd iſſues of a feeble Age;
Scarce living to be Chriſten'd on the Stage!
For Humour farce, for love they rhyme diſpence,
That tolls the knell, for their departed ſence.
Dulneſs might thrive in any trade but this:
'T wou'd recommend to ſome fat Benefice.
Dulneſs, that in a Playhouſe meets diſgrace
Might meet with Reverence, in its proper place.
The fulſome clench that nauſeats the Town
Wou'd from a Judge or Alderman go down!
Such virtue is there in a Robe and gown!
And that inſipid ſtuff which here you hate
Might ſomewhere elſe be call'd a grave debate:
Dulneſs is decent in the Church and State.
But I forget that ſtill 'tis underſtood
Bad Plays are beſt decry'd by ſhowing good:
Sit ſilent then, that my pleas'd Soul may ſee
A Judging Audience once, and worthy me:
My faithfull Scene from true Records ſhall tell
How Trojan valour did the Greek excell;
Your great forefathers ſhall their fame regain,

TRAGEDY.

ACT I. SCENE I. A Camp.

Enter Agamemnon, Menelaus, Ulysses, Diomedes, Nestor.

Agam. PRinces, it seems not strange to us nor new,
That after Nine years Seige Troy makes defence,
Since every Action of Recorded Fame
Has with long difficulties been involv'd,
Not Answering that Idea of the thought
Which gave it Birth, why then you Grecian Chiefs,
With sickly Eyes do you behold our labours,
And think 'em our dishonour, which indeed,
Are the protractive Tryals of the Gods,
To prove heroique Constancy in Men?

Nestor. With due observance of thy Soveraign Seat
Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply,
Thy well-weigh'd words: In struggling with misfortunes,
Lyes the true proof of Virtue: on smooth Seas,
How many bawble Boats dare set their Sails,
And make an equall way with firmer Vessels!
But let the Tempest once inrage that Sea,
And then behold the strong rib'd Argosie,
Bounding between the Ocean and the Ayr
Like Perseus mounted on his Pegasus.
Then where are those weak Rivals of the Maine?

Or to avoid the Tempeſt fled to Port,
Or made a Prey to Neptune : even thus
Do empty ſhow, and true-priz'd worth divide
In ſtorms of Fortune.

Ulyſſes. Mighty Agamemnon!
Heart of our Body, Soul of our deſigns,
In whom the tempers, and the minds of all
Shou'd be inclos'd : hear what Ulyſſes ſpeaks.

Agam.——You have free leave.

Ulyſſes. Troy had been down ere this, and Hectors Sword
Wanted a Maſter but for our diſorders :
The obſervance due to rule has been neglected ;
Obſerve how many Grecian Tents ſtand void
Upon this plain ; ſo many hollow factions :
For when the General is not like the Hive
To whom the Foragers ſhould all repair,
What Hony can our empty Combs expect ?
O when Supremacy of Kings is ſhaken,
What can ſucceed : How cou'd communities
Or peaceful traffick from divided ſhores,
Prerogative of Age, Crowns, Scepters, Lawrells,
But by degree ſtand on their ſolid baſe!
Then every thing reſolves to brutal force
And headlong force is led by hoodwink'd will,
For wild Ambition, like a ravenous Woolf,
Spurd on by will and ſeconded by power,
Muſt make an univerſal prey of all,
And laſt devour it ſelf.

Neſt. Moſt prudently Ulyſſes has diſcover'd
The Malady whereof our ſtate is ſick.

Diom. 'Tis truth he ſpeaks, the General's diſdain'd
By him one ſtep beneath, he by the next :
That next by him below : So each degree
Spurns upward at Superiour eminence :
Thus our diſtempers are their ſole ſupport ;
Troy in our weakneſs lives, not in her ſtrength.

Agam. The Nature of this ſickneſs found, inform us
From whence it draws its birth ?

Ulyſſes. The great Achilles whom opinion crowns
The chief of all our Hoſt——
Having his ears buzz'd with his noiſy Fame
Diſdains thy Sovereign charge, and in his Tent,
Lyes mocking our deſignes, with him Patroclus
Upon a lazy Bed, breaks ſcurvil Jeſts
And with ridiculous and awkard action,

Which, ſlanderer, he imitation calls
Mimicks the Grecian chiefs.
Agam. As how Ulyſſes?
Ulyſſes. Ev'n thee the King of men he do's not ſpare
(The monkey Authour) but thy greatneſs Pageants
And makes of it Rehearſals: like a Player
Bellowing his Paſſion till he break the ſpring
And his rack'd Voice jar to his Audience;
So repreſents he Thee, though more unlike
Then Vulcan is to Venus.
And at this fulſome ſtuff, this wit of Apes,
The large Achilles on his preſt Bed lolling,
From his deep Cheſt roars out a loud Applauſe,
Tickling his ſpleen, and laughing till he wheeze.
Neſtor. Nor are you ſpar'd Ulyſſes, but as you ſpeak in Council
He hems ere he begins, then ſtrokes his Beard,
Caſts down his looks, and winks with half an Eye;
'Has every action, cadence, motion, tone,
All of you but the ſence.
Agam. Fortune was merry
When he was born, and plaid a trick on Nature
To make a mimick Prince: he ne're acts ill
But when he would ſeem wiſe:
For all he ſays or do's from ſerious thought
Appears ſo wretched that he mocks his title
And is his own Buffoon.
Ulyſſes. In imitation of this ſcurril fool
Ajax is grown ſelf-will'd as broad Achilles,
He keeps a Table too, makes Factious Feaſts,
Rails on our State of War, and ſets Thirſites
(A ſlanderous ſlave of an ore-flowing gall)
To level us with low Compariſons:
They tax our Policy with Cowardice
Count Wiſdom of no moment in the War,
In brief, eſteem no Act, but that of hand;
The ſtill and thoughtful parts which move thoſe hands
With them are but the tasks cut out by fear
To be perform'd by Valour.
Agam. Let this be granted, and Achilles horſe
Is more of uſe then he: but you grave pair
Like time and wiſdome marching hand in hand
Muſt put a ſtop to theſe incroaching Ills:
To you we leave the care:
You who cou'd ſhow whence the diſtemper ſprings
Muſt vindicate the Dignity of Kings. Exeunt.

SCENE II. Troy.

Enter Pandarus, and Troilus.

Troil. Why ſhould I fight without the Trojan walls
Who, without fighting, am ore'thrown within:
The Trojan who is Maſter of a Soul
Let him to battel, Troilus has none.

Pand. Will this never be at an end with you?

Troil. The Greeks are ſtrong and skillful to their ſtrength
Fierce to their skill, and to their feirceneſs wary;
But I am weaker then a Womans tear,
Tamer then ſleep, fonder then Ignorance:
And Artleſs as unpractic'd Infancy.

Pand. Well, I have told you enough of this; for my part I'll not meddle nor make any further in your Love: He that will eat of the Roaſtmeat, muſt ſtay for the kindling of the fire.

Troil. Have I not ſtay'd?

Pand. I, the kindling: but you muſt ſtay the ſpitting of the meat.

Troil. Have I not ſtay'd?

Pand. I, the ſpitting: but there's two words to a bargain: you muſt ſtay the roaſting too.

Troil. Still have I ſtay'd: and ſtill the farther off.

Pand. That's but the roaſting, but there's more in this word ſtay; there's the taking off the Spitt, the making of the ſawce, the diſhing, the ſetting on the Table, and the ſaying Grace; nay you muſt ſtay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your chaps.

Troil. At Priams table penſive do I ſit,
And when fair Creſſid comes into my thoughts
(Can ſhe be ſay'd to come, who ne're was abſent!)

Pand. Well, ſhe's a moſt raviſhing creature; and ſhe look'd Yeſterday moſt killingly, ſhe had ſuch a ſtroke with her eyes, ſhe cut to the quick with every glance of e'm.

Troil. I was about to tell thee, when my heart
Was ready with a ſigh to cleave in two
Leſt Hector, or my Father ſhould perceive me,
I have with mighty anguiſh of my Soul
Juſt at the Birth ſtifled this ſtill-born-ſigh
And forc'd my face into a painful ſmile.

Pand. I meaſur'd her with my girdle Yeſterday, ſhe's not half a yard about the waſte, but ſo taper a ſhape did I never ſee, but when I had her in my arms, Lord thought I, and by my troth I could not forbear ſighing, if Prince Troilus had her at this advantage, and I were holding of the door.—And she were a thought taller, but as she is, she wants not an Inch of Hellen neither; but there's no more comparison between the Women—there was wit, there was a sweet tongue: How her words melteth in her mouth! Mercury wou'd have been glad to have had such a tongue in his mouth I warrant him.

I wou'd some body had heard her talk Yesterday, as I did:

Troil. Oh Pandarus, when I tell thee I am mad
In Cressid's Love, thou answer'st she is fair;
Praisest her eyes, her stature and her wit;
But praising thus, instead of oyl and balme,
Thou lay'st in every wound her Love has giv'n me
The Sword that made it.

Pand. I give her but her due.

Troil. Thou give'st her not so much.

Pand. Faith 'lle speak no more of her, let her be as she is:
If she be a beauty 'tis the better for her, and she be not
She has the mends in her own hands for Pandarus.

Troil. In spight of me thou wilt mistake my meaning.

Pand. I have had but my labour for my pains,
Ill thought on of her, and ill thought on of you:
Gone between and between, and am ground in the Millstones
For my Labour.

Troil. What art thou angry Pandarus with thy friend?

Pand. Because she's my Niece, therefore she's not so fair as Hellen, and she were not my Niece, show me such another piece of Womans flesh; take her limb by limb, I say no more, but if Paris had seen her first, Menelaus had been no Cuckold: but what care I if she were a Blackmoore, what am I the better for her face.

Troil. Say'd I she was not beautiful.

Pand. I care not if you did, she's a fool to stay behind her Father Calchas, let her to the Greeks; and so I'le tell her: for my part I am resolute, I'le meddle no more in your affairs.

Troil. But hear me!

Pand. Not I.

Troil. Dear Pandarus——

Pand. Pray speak no more on't, I'le not burn my fingers in another body's business, I'le leave it as I found it, & there's an end. [Exit Pandarus.

Troil. O Gods, how do you torture me?
I cannot come to Cressid but by him,
And he's as peevish to be woo'd to wooe,
As she is to be won.

Enter Æneas.

Æneas. How now, Prince Troilus; why not in the battle?

Troil. Because not there, this Womans answer suites me;

For

For Womanniſh it is to be from thence:
What news Æneas from the field to day?
Æn. Paris is hurt.
Troil. By whom?
Æn. By Menelaus. Hark what good ſport Alarum within.
Is out of Town to day, when I hear ſuch Muſick
I cannot hold from dancing.
Troil. I'le make one,
And try to loſe an anxious thought or two
In heat of action.
[Aſide] Thus Coward-like from love to War I run,
Seek the leſs dangers, and the greater ſhun. [Exit Troil.

Enter Creſſida.

Creſſid. My Lord Æneas, who were thoſe went by? I mean the Ladys!
Æn. Queen Hecuba, and Helien.
Creſſi. And whither go they?
Æn. Up to the Weſtern Tower.
Whoſe height commands as ſubject, all the vale;
To ſee the battle, Hector whoſe patience
Is fix'd like that of Heav'n, to day was mov'd:
He chid Andromache, and ſtrook his Armourer,
And as there were good Husbandry in War,
Before the Sun was up he went to field;
Your pardon Lady that's my buſineſs too. [Exit Æneas.
Creſſi. Hectors a gallant Wariour.

Enter Pandarus.

Pand. What's that, what's that!
Creſſi. Good morrow Uncle Pandarus.
Pand. Good morrow Couſin Creſſida: when were you at Court?
Creſſi. This morning Uncle!
Pand. What were you a talking when I came? was Hector arm'd,
And gone ere ye came? Hector was ſtirring early.
Creſſi. That I was talking of; and of his anger!
Pand. Was he angry ſay you? true he was ſo, and I know the cauſe:
He was ſtruck down yeſterday in the battle, but he'll lay about him;
he'll cry quittance with 'em to day I'le anſwer for him: and there's Troilus will not come far behind him; let 'em take heed of Troilus, I can tell 'em that too.
Creſſi. What was he ſtruck down too?
Pand. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.
Creſſi. Oh Jupiter! there's no compariſon, Troilus the better man!
Pand. What, no compariſon between Hector and Troilus? do you know a man if you ſee him?

Creſſi.

Creſſi. No, for he may look like a man, and not be one.

Pand. Well, I ſay Troilus is Troilus.

Creſſi. That's what I ſay, for I am ſure he is not Hector.

Pand. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, make your beſt of that Neece!

Creſſi. 'Tis true, for each of 'em is himſelf.

Pand. Himſelf! alas poor Troilus ! I wou'd he were himſelf, well the Gods are all ſufficient, and time muſt mend or end : I wou'd he were himſelf, and wou'd I were a Lady for his ſake. I would not anſwer for my Maidenhead,——No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Creſſi. Excuſe me.

Pand. Pardon me : Troilus is in the bud ; 'tis early day with him, you ſhall tell me another tale when Troilus is come to bearing : and yet he'll not bear neither in ſome ſence. No, Hector ſhall never have his virtues.

Creſſi. No matter.

Pand. Nor his beauty, nor his faſhion, nor his wit, he ſhall have nothing of him.

Creſſi. They would not become him, his own are better.

Pand. How, his own better ! you have no judgment Neece, Hellen her ſelf ſwore tother day, that Troilus for a manly brown complexion ; (for ſo it is, I muſt confeſs ;) not brown neither.

Creſſi. No, but very brown.

Thnd. Faith to ſay truth, brown and not brown : come I ſwear to you, I think Hellen loves him better then Paris : Nay I'm ſure ſhe does, ſhe comes me to him tother day, into the bow window, and you know Troilus has not above three or four hairs on his chin.

Creſſi. That's but a bare commendation.

Pand. But to prove to you that Hellen loves him, ſhe comes, and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin !

Creſſi. Has he been fighting then, how came it cloven ?

Pand. Why, you know it is dimpled. I cannot chooſe but laugh to think how ſhe tickled his cloven chin : She has a marvellous white hand I muſt needs confeſs.
But let that paſs, for I know who has a whiter :
Well Couſin I told you a thing yeſterday, think on't, think on't.

Creſſi. So I do Uncle.

Pand. I'le beſworn 'tis true ; he will weep ye, and 'twere a man born in April. [A Retreat ſounded.
Hark, they are returning from the field ; ſhall we ſtay and ſee 'em as they come by, ſweet Neece do, ſweet Neece Creſſida.

Creſſi. For once you ſhall command me.

Pand. Here, here, here's an excellent place ; we may ſee 'em here moſt bravely, and I'le tell you all their names as they paſs by : but mark Troilus above the reſt, mark Troilus, he's worth your marking.

Æneas

Æneas passes over the Stage.

Cressi. Speak not so loud then.

Pand. That's Æneas, Is't not a brave man that, he's a swinger, many a Grecian he has laid with his face upward; but mark Troilus, you shall see anon.

Enter Anthenor, passing.

That's Anthenor, he has a notable head-peece I can tell you, and he's the ablest man for judgment in all Troy, you may turn him loose i'faith, and by my troth a proper person: When comes Troilus? I'le show you Troilus anon, if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

That's Hector, that, that, look you that, there's a fellow, go thy way Hector, there's a brave man Neece: O brave Hector, look how he looks! there's a countenance! is't not a brave man Neece?

Cressi. I always told you so.

Pand. Is a not? it does a mans heart good to look on him, look you, look you there, what hacks are on his Helmet! this was no boys play i'faith, he laid it on with a vengeance, take it off whose who's will as they say! there are hacks Neece!

Cressi. Were those with Swords.

Pand. Swords, or Bucklers, Faulchions, Darts, and Lances! any thing he cares not! and the devil come, 'tis all one to him, by Jupiter he looks so terribly that I am half afraid to praise him.

Enter Paris.

Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris, look ye yonder Neece; is't not a brave young Prince too! He draws the best bow in all Troy, he hits you to a span twelvescore level; who said he came home hurt to day: why this will do Hellen's heart good now! Ha! that I cou'd see Troilus now!

Enter Helenus.

Cressi. Who's that black man Uncle?

Pand. That's Helenus, I marvel where Troilus is all this while? that's Helenus, I think Troilus went not forth to day; that's Helenus.

Cressi. Can Helenus fight Uncle?

Pand. Helenus! No, yes, he'll fight indifferently well, I marvel in my heart what's become of Troilus? Hark! do you not hear the people cry Troilus? Helenus is a Priest and keeps a whore; he'll fight for's whore, or he's no true Priest I warrant him.

Enter Troilus passing over.

Cressi. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Pand.

Pand. Where, yonder! that's Deiphobus: No I lye, I lye, that's Troilus, there's a man Neece! hem! O brave Troilus! the Prince of chivalry, and flower of fidelity!

Cressi. Peace, for shame peace.

Pand. Nay but mark him then! O brave Troilus! there's a man of men Neece! look you how his Sword is bloody, and his Helmet more hack'd then Hectors, and how he looks, and how he goes! O admirable youth! he nere saw two and twenty. Go thy way Troilus, go thy way! had I a sister were a grace, and a daughter a Goddesse, he shou'd take his choice of 'em, O admirable man! Paris! Paris is dirt to him, and I warrant Hellen to change, wou'd give all the shooes in her shop to boot.

Enter Common Souldiers passing over.

Cressi. Here come more.

Pand. Asses, fools, dolts, dirt and dung, stuff and lumber: porredg after meat? but I cou'd live and dye with Troilus. Nere look Neece, nere look, the Lyons are gone; Apes and Monkeys, the fag end of the creation. I had rather be such a man as Troilus, then Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cressi. There's Achilles among the Greeks, he's a brave man!

Pand. Achilles! a Carman, a beast of burden; a very Camel, have you any eyes Neece, do you know a man! is he to be compar'd with Troilus!

Enter Page.

Page. Sir, my Lord Troilus wou'd instantly speak with you.

Pand. Where boy, where!

Page. At his own house, if you think convenient.

Pand. Good boy tell him I come instantly, I doubt he's wounded, farewell good Neece: But I'le be with you by and by.

Cressi. To bring me Uncle!

Pand. I, a token from Prince Troilus.

Cressi. By the same token you are a procurer Uncle. [Exit Pandarus.

Cressida alone.

A strange dissembling Sex we Women are,
Well may we men, when we our selves deceive.
Long has my secret Soul lov'd Troilus.
I drunk his praises from my Uncles mouth,
As if my ears cou'd nere be satisfi'd;
Why then, why said I not, I love this Prince?
How cou'd my tongue conspire against my heart,
To say I lov'd him not, O childish love!
'Tis like an Infant froward in his play,
And what he most desires, he throws away. [Exit Cressida.

ACT II. SCENE I. Troy.

Priam, Hector, Troilus, Æneas.

Priam. After th' expence of so much time and blood,
Thus once again the Grecians send to Troy.
Deliver Hellen, and all other loss
Shall be forgotten Hector, what say you to't ?
Hect. Though no man less can fear the Greeks than I,
Yet there's no Virgin of more tender heart
More ready to cry out, who knows the consequence,
Then Hector is; for modest doubt is mix'd
With manly courage best, let Hellen go.
If we have lost so many lives of ours,
To keep a thing not ours; not worth to us
The vallue of a man, what reason is there
Still to retain the cause of so much ill ?
Troil. Fy, fy, my noble Brother !
Weigh you the worth and honour of a King,
So great as Asia's Monarch in a scale
Of common ounces thus ?
Are fears and reasons fit to be consider'd,
When a Kings fame is question'd ?
Hect. Brother, she's not worth
What her defence has cost us.
Troil. What's ought but as 'tis vallued ?
Hect. But vallue dwels not in opinion only:
It holds the dignity and estimation,
As well, wherein 'tis precious of it self.
As in the prizer, 'tis Idolatry
To make the Service greater than the God.
Troil. We turn not back the Silks upon the Merchant
When we have worn 'em: the remaining food
Throw not away because we now are full.
If you confess 'twas wisedome Paris went,
As you must needs; for you all cry'd go, go,
If you'll confess he brought home noble prize
As you must needs, for you all clapt your hands,
And cry'd inestimable: why do you now
So underrate the vallue of your purchase ?
For let me tell you 'tis unmanly theft
When we have taken what we fear to keep!
Æne. There's not the meanest Spirit in our party

Without a heart to dare, or Sword to draw,
When Hellen is defended: none ſo noble
Whoſe life were ill beſtowed, or death unfam'd,
When Helleu is the Subject.
Priam. So ſays Paris.
Like one beſotted on effeminate joys,
He has the honey ſtill, but theſe the gall.
Æneas. He not propoſes meerly to himſelf
The pleaſures ſuch a beauty brings with it:
But he wou'd have the ſtain of Hellen's rape
Wip'd off in honourable keeping her.
Hect. Troilus and Æneas you have ſayd:
If ſaying ſuperficiall things be reaſon.
But if this Hellen be anothers wife,
The Morall laws of Nature and of Nation's Speak loud ſhe be reſtor'd: thus to perſiſt
In doing wrong, extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more ſo: Hectors opinion
Is this, is in way of truth: yet ne'retheleſs
My ſprightly Brother I encline to you
In reſolution to defend her ſtill:
For 'tis a cauſe on which our Trojan honour
And common reputation will depend.
Troil. Why there you touch'd the life of our deſigne:
Were it not glory that we covet more
Then war and vengeance (beaſts and womens pleaſure)
I wou d not wiſh a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence: But oh my Brother
She is a ſubject of renoun and honour,
And I preſume brave Hector wou'd not loſe
The rich advantage of his future fame
For the wide worlds revenew: —I have buſineſs;
But glad I am to leave you thus reſolv'd.
When ſuch arms ſtrike, ne're doubt of the ſucceſs.
Æneas. May we not gueſſe?
Troil. You may, and be deceiv'd. [Exit Troil.
Hect. A woman on my life: ev'n ſo it happens,
Religion, ſtate affairs, whater'es the theme
It ends in women ſtill.

Enter Andromache.

Priam. See here's your wife
To make that maxim good.
Hect. Welcome Andromache: your looks are cheerfull;
You bring ſome pleaſing news.

Andro. Nothing that's serious.
Your little Son Astyanax has employ'd me,
As his Ambassadresse.
Hect. Upon what errand?
Andro. No less then that his Grandfather this day
Would make him Knight: he longs to kill a Grecian:
For shou'd he stay to be a man, he thinks
Youll kill 'em all; and leave no work for him.
Priam. Your own blood, Hector.
Andro. And therefore he designes to send a challenge
To Agamemnon, Ajax, or Achilles
To prove they do not well to burn our fields;
And keep us coop'd like prisner's in a Town:
To lead this lazy life.
Hect. What sparks of honour
Fly from this child! the God's speak in him sure:
——It shall be so——I'le do't.
Priam. What means my Son?
Hect. To send a challenge to the boldest Greek;
Is not that Country ours? those fruitfull Fields
Wash'd by yon Silver flood, are they not ours?
Those teeming Vines that tempt our longing eyes,
Shall we behold e'm? shall we call e'm ours
And date not make e'm so? by Heavens I'le know
Which of these haughty Grecians, dares to think
He can keep Hector prisner here in Troy.
Priam. If Hector only were a private Man,
This wou'd be courage, but in him 'tis madness.
The generall safety on your life depends;
And shou'd you perish in this rash attempt
Troy with a groan, would feel her Soul go out:
And breath her last in you.
Æneas. The task you undertake is hazardous:
Suppose you win, what wou'd the profit be?
If Ajax or Achilles fell beneath
Your thundring Arm, wou'd all the rest depart?
Wou'd Agamemnon, or his injur'd Brother
Set sayl for this? then it were worth your danger:
But, as it is, we throw our utmost stake
Against whole heaps of theirs.
Priam. He tells you true.
Æneas. Suppose one, Ajax, or Achilles lost,
They can repair with more that single loss:
Troy has but one, one Hector.
Hect. No Æneas?

What then art thou; and what is Troilus?
What will Astyanax be?
Priam. An Hector one day.
But you must let him live to be a Hector.
And who shall make him such when you are gone?
Who shall instruct his tenderness in arms,
Or give his childhood lessons of the war?
Who shall defend the promise of his youth
And make it bear in Manhood? the young Sappling
Is shrowded long beneath the Mother tree
Before it be transplanted from its Earth,
And trust it self for growth.
Hect. Alas, my Father!
You have not drawn one reason from your self,
But publick safety, and my Sons green years:
In this neglecting that main argument
Trust me you chide my filiall piety:
As if I cou'd be won from my resolves
By Troy, or by my Son, or any name
More dear to me than yours.
Priam. I did not name my self; because I know
When thou art gone, I need no Grecian Sword,
To help me dye, but only Hectors loss.
Daughter, why speak not you? why stand you silent?
Have you no right in Hector, as a wife?
Andro. I would be worthy to be Hectors wife:
And had I been a Man, as my Soul's one
I had aspir'd a nobler name, his friend.
How I love Hector, (need I say I love him?)
I am not but in him:
But when I see him arming for his Honour,
His Country and his Gods, that martial fire
That mounts his courage, kindles ev'n to me:
And when the Trojan Matrons wait him out
With pray'rs, and meet with blessings his return;
The pride of Virtue, beats within my breast,
To wipe away the sweat and dust of War:
And dress my Heroe, glorious in his wounds.
Hect. Come to my Arms, thou manlier Virtue come;
Thou better Name than wife! wou'dst thou not blush [Embrace.
To hug a coward thus?
Priam. Yet still I fear!
Andro. There spoke a woman, pardon Royal Sir;
Has he not met a thousand lifted Swords,
Of thick rank'd Grecians, and shall one affright him?

There's not a day but he encounters Armies;
And yet as safe, as if the broad brim'd Shield
That Pallas wears, were held 'twixt him and death.

Hect. Thou knowst me well; and thou shalt praise me more,
Gods make me worthy of thee!

Andro. You shall be
My Knight this day, you shall not wear a cause,
So black as Hellens rape upon your breast,
Let Paris fight for Helen; guilt for guilt,
But when you fight for Honour and for me,
Then let our equal Gods behold an Act,
They may not blush to Crown.

Hect. Æneas go.
And bear my Challenge to the Grecian Camp,
If there be one amongst the best of Greece,
Who holds his honour higher then his ease,
Who knows his valour, and knows not his fear;
Who loves his Mistress more then in confession:
And dares avow her beauty and her worth,
In other Arms then hers; to him this Challenge.
I have a Lady of more truth and beauty,
Then ever Greek did compass in his arms:
And will to morrow, with the Trumpets call,
Mid-way, between their Tents, and these our Walls,
Maintains what I have said, if any come
My Sword shall honour him, if none shall dare,
Then shall I say at my return to Troy,
The Grecian dames, are Sun-burnt, and not worth
The splinter of a Lance.

Æneas. It shall be told 'em,
As boldly as you gave it.

Priam. Heav'n protect thee. [Exeunt Omnes.

SCENE II.

Pandarus, Cressida.

Pand. YOnder he stands poor wretch! there stands he, with such a look, and such a face, and such begging eyes; there he stands poor prisoner.

Cressi. What a deluge of words do you pour out Uncle, to say just nothing?

Pand.

Pand. Nothing do you call it, is that nothing, do you call it nothing? why he looks for all the World, like one of your rascally Malefactors, just thrown off the Gibbet, with his cap down, his arms ty'd down, his feet sprunting, his body swinging, nothing do you call it? this is nothing with a vengeance.

Cress. Or, what think you of a hurt bird, that flutters about with a broken wing?

Pand. Why go to then, he cannot fly away then, then, that's certain, that's undoubted: there he lies to be taken up: but if you had seen him, when I said to him, take a good heart man, and follow me: and fear no colours, and speak your mind man: she can never stand you: she will fall, and 'twere a leaf in Autumn.

Cres. Did you tell him all this without my consent?

Pand. Why you did consent, your eyes consented; they blab'd, they leer'd, their very corners blabb'd. But you'll say your tongue sayd nothing. No I warrant it: your tongue was wiser; your tongue was better bred: your tongue kept its own counsell: Nay, I'le say that for you, your tongue sayd nothing. Well such a shamefac'd couple did I never see days o' my life: so fraid of one another; such ado to bring you to the business: well if this job were well over, if ever I lose my pains again with an awkard couple, let me be painted in the signe-post for the Labour in vain: fye upon't, fye upon't; there's no conscience in't: all honest people will cry shame on't.

Cres. Where is this Monster to be shown? what's to be given for a sight of him?

Pand Why ready money, ready-money; you carry it about you: give and take is square-dealing; for in my conscience he's as errant a maid as you are: I was fain to use violence to him, to pull him hither: and he pull'd and I pull'd: for you must know he's absolutely the strongest youth in Troy: to'ther day he took Hellen in one hand, and Paris in to'ther, and danc'd 'em at one another at arms-end, and 'twere two Moppets: there was a back, there were bone and Sinnews: there was a back for you.

Cress. For these good procuring Offices you'l be damn'd one day Uncle.

Pand. Who I damn'd? faith I doubt I shall: by my troth I think I shall, nay if a man be damn'd for doing good, as thou saist, it may go hard with me.

Cress. Then I'le not see Prince Troilus, I'le not be accessary to your damnation.

Pand. How, not see Prince Troilus? why I have engag'd, I have promis'd, I have past my word, I care not for damning, let me alone for damning; I vallue not damning in comparison with my word. If I am damn'd it shall be a good damning to thee girl, thou shalt be my heir, heir, come 'tis a virtuous girl, thou shalt help me to keep my word, thou shalt see Prince Troilus.

Cressi. The ventures great.

Pand. No venture in the World, thy Mother ventur'd it for thee, and thou shalt venture it for my little Cousin that must be.

Cressi. Weigh but my fears, Prince Troilus is young.——

Pand. Marry is he, there's no fear in that I hope, the fear were if he were old and feeble.

Cressi. And I a woman.

Pand. No fear yet, thou art a Woman, and he's a Man, put them two together, put 'em together.

Cressi. And if I shou'd be frail.——

Pand. There's all my fear that thou art not frail: thou shou'dst be frail, all flesh is frail.

Cressi. Are you my Uncle, and can give this counsel to your own Brothers daughter.

Pand. If thou wert my own daughter a thousand times over, I cou'd do no better for thee, what wou'dst thou have girl, he's a Prince and a young Prince, and a loving young Prince! an Uncle dost thou call me, by Cupid I am a father to thee; get thee in, get thee in girl, I hear him coming. And do you hear Neice! I give you leave, to deny a little 'twill be decent: but take heed of obstinacy, that's a vice; no obstinacy my dear Niece.

Enter Troylus.

Troil. Now Pandarus.

Pand. Now, my sweet Prince! have you seen my Niece? no I know you have not.

Troylus: No Pandarus; I stalk about your doors
Like a strange Soul upon the Stygian banks
Staying for waftage: O be thou my Charon,
And give me a swift transportanee to Elysium,
And fly with me to Cressida.

Pand. Walk here a moment more: I'le bring her straight.

Troil. I fear she will not come: most sure she will not.

Pand. How not come, and I her Uncle! why I tell you Prince, she twitters at you. Ah poor sweet Rogue, ah little Rogue, now does she think, and think, and think again of what must be betwixt you two. Oh sweet,—oh sweet—O——what not come, and I her Uncle?

Troil. Still thou flatter'st me; but prithee flatter still, for I wou'd hope; I wou'd not wake out of my pleasing dream: oh hope how sweet thou art! but to hope always, and have no effect of what we hope!

Pand. Oh faint heart, faint heart! well there's much good matter in these old proverbs! No, she'll not come I warrant her; she has no blood of mine in her, not so much as will fill a flea: but if she does not come, and come, and come with a swing into your arms, I say no more, but she has renounc'd all grace, and there's an end.

Troil. I will believe thee: go then, but be sure:

Pand. No, you wou'd not have me go; you are indifferent: shall I go say you: speak the word then:—yet I care not: you may stand in your own light; and lose a sweet young Ladies heart: well, I shall not go then!

Troil. Fly, fly, thou tortur'st me.

Pand. Do I so, do I so! do I torture you indeed! well I will go.

Troil. But yet thou dost not go?

Pand. I go immediately, directly, in a twinkling, with a thought. yet you think a man never does enough for you: I have been labouring in your business like any Moyle. I was with Prince Paris this morning, to make your excuse at night for not supping at Court: and I found him, faith how do you think I found him; it does my heart good to think how I found him: yet you think a man never does enough for you.

Troil. Will you go then, what's this to Cressida?

Pand. Why you will not hear a Man; what's this to Cressida? why I found him abed, abed with Hellena by my troth: 'tis a sweet Queen, a sweet Queen, a very sweet Queen;——but she's nothing to my Cousin Cressida; she's a blowse, a gipsie, a Tawney-moor to my Cousin Cressida: And she lay with one white arm underneath the whorsons neck: oh such a white, lilly white, round, plump arm it was——and you must know it was stript up to th'elbows: and she did so kisse him, and so huggle him:——as who shou'd say——

Troil. But still thou stay'st: what's this to Cressida?

Pand. Why I made your excuse to your Brother Paris; that I think's to Cressida; but such an arm, such a hand, such taper fingers, tother hand was under the bed-cloaths, that I saw not, I confess, that hand I saw not.

Troil. Again thou tortur'st me.

Pand. Nay I was tortur'd too; old as I am, I was tortur'd too: but for all that, I cou'd make a shift, to make him, to make your excuse, to make your father;——by Jove when I think of that hand, I am so ravish'd, that I know not what I say: I was tortur'd too.

[Troilus turns away discontented.

Well I go, I go; I fetch her, I bring her, I conduct her: not come quoth a, and I her Uncle! Exit Pandarus.

Troilus. Im'e giddy; expectation whirls me round:
The imaginary relish is so sweet,
That it enchants my sence; what will it be
When I shall taste that Nectar?
It must be either death, or joy too fine

For the capacity of human powers.
I fear it much: and I do fear beſide,
That I ſhall loſe diſtinction in my joys:
As does a battle, when they charge on heaps
A flying Enemy.

Re-enter Pandarus.

Pand. She's making her ready: ſhe'll come ſtraight, you muſt be witty now; ſhe does ſo bluſh, and fetches her breath ſo ſhort, as if ſhe were frighted with a ſpright: 'tis the prettieſt villain, ſhe fetches her breath ſo ſhort, as 'twere a new ta'ne Sparrow.

Troil. Juſt ſuch a paſſion, does heave up my breaſt!
My heart beats thicker than a feavouriſh pulſe:
I know not where I am, nor what I do:
Juſt like a ſlave, at unawares encountring
The eye of Majeſty:——Leade on, I'le follow.

Exeunt together.

SCENE III. The Camp.

Neſtor, Ulyſſes.

Ulyſſ. I have conceiv'd an embryo in my brain:
Be you my time to bring it to ſome ſhape.
Neſt. What is't, Ulyſſes?
Ulyſſ. The ſeeded pride,
That has to this maturity blown up
In rank Achilles, muſt or now be cropt,
Or ſhedding, breed a nurſery of like ill,
To overtop us all.
Neſt. That's my opinion.
Ulyſſ. This challenge which Æneas brings from Hector,
However it be ſpred in general terms,
Relates in purpoſe only to Achilles.
And will it wake him to the anſwer think you?
Neſt. It ought to do: whom can we elſe oppoſe
Who cou'd from Hector bring his honour off,
If not Achilles? the Succeſſe of this
Although particular, will give an Omen
Of good or bad, ev'n to the general cauſe.
Ulyſſ. Pardon me Neſtor, if I contradict you.
Therefore 'tis fit Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us like Merchants ſhow our courſeſt wares,
And think perchance they'll ſell: but if they do not,
The luſtre of our better yet unſhown
Will ſhow the better; let us not conſent

Our

Our greateſt warriour ſhou'd be match'd with Hector.
For both our honour and our ſhame in this,
Shall be attended with ſtrange followers.
Neſt. I ſee e'm not with my old eyes; what are they?
Ulyſs. What glory our Achilles gains from Hector.
Were he not proud we all ſhould ſhare with him:
But he already is too inſolent:
And we had better parch in Affrick Sun
Than in his pride, ſhou'd he ſcape Hector fair.
But grant he ſhou'd be foyl'd
Why then our common reputation ſuffers,
In that of our beſt Man: No, make a Lottery;
And by device let blockiſh Ajax draw
The chance to fight with Hector: among our ſelves
Give him allowance as the braver Man;
For that will phyſick the great Myrmidon,
Who ſwells with loud applauſe; and make him fall
His Creſt, if brainleſs Ajax come ſafe off.
If not, we yet preſerve a fair opinion,
That we have better men.
Neſt. Now I begin to reliſh thy advice:
Come let us go to Agamemnon ſtraight,
T'inform him of our project.
Ulyſs. 'Tis not ripe.
The skilfull Surgeon will not lanch a ſore
Till Nature has digeſted and prepar'd
The growing humours to his healing purpoſe.
Elſe muſt he often grieve the patient's ſence,
When one inciſion once well-time'd wou'd ſerve:
Are not Achilles, and dull Ajax friends?
Neſt. As much as fools can be.
Ulyſs. That knot of friendſhip firſt muſt be unty'd
Ere we can reach our ends; for while they love each other
Both hating us, will draw too ſtrong a byaſſe,
And all the Camp will lean that way they draw:
For brutall courage is the Soldiers Idoll:
So, if one prove contemptuous, back'd by to'ther,
'Twill give the law to cool and ſober ſence,
And place the power of war in Mad-mens hands.
Neſt. Now I conceive you; were they once divided,
And one of them made ours, that one would check
The others towring growth: and keep both low,
As Inſtruments, and not as Lords of war.
And this muſt be by ſecret coals of envy,
Blown in their breſt: compariſons of worth;

Great actions weigh'd of each: and each the best,
As we shall give him voice.
Ulyss. Here comes Thersites.

Enter Thersites.

Who feeds on Ajax: yet loves him not, because he cannot love.
But as a Species, differing from mankinde,
Hates all he sees; and rails at all he knows;
But hates them most, from whom he most receives.
Disdaining that his lot should be so low.
That he should want the kindeness which he takes.
Nest. There's none so fit an Engine: Save ye Thersites.
Ulyss. Hayl noble Grecian, Thou relief of toyls,
Soul of our mirth, and joy of sullen war.
In whose converse our winter-nights are short,
And Summer-days not tedious.
Thers. Hang you both.
Nest. How hang us both!
Thers. But hang thee first, thou very reverend fool!
Thou sapless Oke, that liv'st by wanting thought.
And now in thy three hundreth year repin'st
Thou should'st be fell'd: hanging's a civil death,
The death of men: thou canst not hang: thy trunk
Is only fit for gallows to hang others.
Nest. A fine greeting.
Thers. A fine old Dotard, to repine at hanging
At such an Age! what saw the Gods in thee
That a Cock-Sparrow should but live three years,
And thou should'st last three Ages! he's thy better;
He uses life: he treads himself to death.
Thou hast forgot thy use some hundred years:
Thou stump of Man, thou worn-out broom: thou lumber.
Nest. I'le hear no more of him, his poyson works;
What curse me for my age!
Ulyss. Hold, you mistake him, Nestor; 'tis his custome:
What malice is there in a mirthfull scene!
'Tis but a keen-edg'd Sword, spread o're with balme
To heal the wound it makes:
Thers. Thou beg'st a curse!
May'st thou quit scores then, and be hang'd on Nestor,
Who hangs on thee: thou lead'st him by the nose:
Thou play'st him like a puppet; speak'st within him,
And when thou hast contriv'd some dark design
To loose a thousand Greeks; make dogs meat of us,
Thou layst thy Cuckows egg within his nest,

And

And mak'ſt him hatch it: teacheſt his remembrance
To lye; and ſay, the like of it was practis'd
Two hundred years ago; thou bring'ſt the brain
And he brings only beard to vouch thy plots;
Neſt. I'me no mans fool.
Therſ. Then be thy own, that's worſe.
Neſt. He'll rail all day.
Vlyſs. Then we ſhall learn all day.
Who forms the body to a gracefull carriage
Muſt imitate our awkard motions firſt;
The ſame preſcription does the wiſe Therſites
Apply to mend our minds. The ſame he uſes
To Ajax, to Achilles; to the reſt;
His Satyrs are the phyſick of the Camp.
Therſ. Wou'd they were poyſon to't, Rats-bane and Hemlock:
Nothing elſe can mend you; and thoſe two brawny fools.
Vlyſs. He hits e'm right:
Are they not ſuch my Neſtor?
Thers. Dolt-heads, Aſſes.
And beaſts of burtheu; Ajax and Achilles!
The pillars, no, the porters of the war.
Hard-headed Rogues! Engines, meer wooden Engines,
Puſh'd on to do your work.
Neſt. They are indeed.
Therſ. But what a Rogue art thou
To ſay they are indeed: Heaven made e,m horſes
And thou put'ſt on their harneſſe: rid'ſt and ſpur'ſt e'm:
Uſurp'ſt upon heav'ns fools, and mak'ſt e'm thine.
Neſt. No: they are headſtrong fools to be corrected
By none but by Therſites: thou alone
Canſt tame, and train e'm to their proper uſe;
And doing this mayſt claim a juſt reward
From Greece, and Royall Agamemnons hands.
Therſ. Ay, when you need a man, you talk of giving;
For wit's a dear commodity among you:
But when you do not want him, then ſtale porridge,
A ſtarv'd dog wou'd not lap; and furrow water
Is all the wine we taſte, give drabs and pimps:
Ile have no gifts with hooks at end of e'm.
Vlyſs. Is this a Man, O Neſtor to be bought!
Aſia's not price enough! bid the world for him.
And ſhall this man, this Hermes this Apollo,
Sit lagg of Ajax table? almoſt minſtrell,
And with his preſence grace a brainleſs feaſt?
Why they con ſence from him grow wits by rote,

And yet, by ill repeating, libell him;
Making his wit their nonsence: nay they scorn him;
Call him bought rayler, mercenary tongue!
Play him for sport at meals, and kick him off.

Thers. Yes they can kick; my buttocks feel they can:
They have their Asses tricks: but I'le eat pebbles,
Ile starve; 'tis brave to starve, 'tis like a Soldier;
Before I'le feed those wit-starv'd rogues with sence.
They shall eat dry, and choke for want of wit,
Ere they be moisten'd with one drop of mine.
Ajax, and Achilles, two mudd-walls of fool,
That only differ in degrees of thickness.

Ulyss. I'de be reveng'd of both, when wine fumes high,
Set e m to prate, to boast their brutall strength,
To vye their stupid courage, till they quarrell
And play at hard-head with their empty Skulls.

Thers. Yes; they shall but and kick; and all the while
Ile think they kick for me: they shall fell timber
On both sides; and then log-wood will be cheap.

Nest. And Agamemnon——

Thers. Pox of Agamemnon;
Cannot I do a mischief for my self
But he must thank me for't!

Ulyss. to Nestor.

Away; our work is done. Exeunt Ulysses, Nestor.

Thers. This Agamemnon is a King of clouts:
A chip in porredge.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Thersites!

Thers. Set up to frighten Daws from Cherry trees.

Ajax. Dogg!

Thers. A standard to march under!

Ajax Thou bitch-woolf! canst thou not hear! feel then.

Strikes him.

Thers. The plague of Greece, and Hellens Pox light on thee,
Thou mungrill mastiffe; thou beef-witted Lord.

Ajax. Speak then, thou mouldy leaven of the Camp.
Speak or Ile beat thee into handsomeness.

Thirs. I shall sooner rayle thee into wit: thou canst kick, canst thou?
A red murrayn on thy Jades tricks!

Ajax. Tell me the Proclamation:

Thers. Thou art proclaim'd a fool I think.

Ajax. You whorson Cur take that. [Strikes him.

Thers. Thou Scurvy valiant Asse.

Ajax. Thou slave.

Thers.

Thers. Thou Lord! —I, do, do,—wou'd my buttocks were Iron for thy ſake.

Enter Achilles. Patroclus.

Achill. Why how now Ajax! wherefore do you this?
How now Therſites, what's the matter man!

Thers. I ſay this Ajax wears his wit in's belly, and his guts in brains.

Achill. Peace fool.

Thers. I wou'd have peace; but the fool will not.

Prtrocl. But what's the quarrell!

Ajax. I bad him tell me the proclamation, and he rails upon me.

Thers. I ſerve thee not:

Ajax. I ſhall cut out your tongue!

Thers. 'Tis no matter; I ſhall ſpeak as much ſence as thou afterwards: Ile ſee you hang'd ere I come any more to your Tent: Ile keep where theres wit ſtirring, and leave the faction of fools.— [going.

Achill. Nay, thou ſhalt not go Therſites, till we have ſquees'd the venome out of thee: prithee inform us of this Proclamation.

Thers. Why you empty fuz-balls, your heads are full of nothing elſe but Proclamations.

Ajax. Tell us the news I ſay.

Thirs. You ſay! why you never ſaid any thing in all your life! But ſince you will know, 'tis proclam'd through the Army, that Hector is to cudgell you to morrow.

Achilles. How cudgell him, Therſites!

Thers. Nay, you may take a childs part ont if you have ſo much courage, for Hector has challeng'd the tougheſt of the Greeks: and 'tis in diſpute which of your two heads is the ſonndeſt timber.
A knotty piece of work he'll have betwixt your noddles,

Achill. If Hector be to fight with any Greeke,
He knows his Man.

Ajax. Yes; he may know his man, without Art Magick.

Thers. So he had need: for to my certain knowledge neither of you two are conjurers to inform him.

Achill. to Ajax. You do not mean your ſelf, ſure.

Ajax. I mean nothing

Thers. Thou mean'ſt ſo always.

Achill. Umh! mean nothing!

Thers, aſide. Jove if it be thy will, let theſe two fools quarrell about nothing: 'tis a cauſe that's worthy of 'em.

Ajax. You ſayd he knew his Man: is there but one?
One Man amongſt the Greeks!

Achill. Since you will have it,
but one to fight with Hector.

Ajax. Then I am he;

Achil.

Achill. Weak Ajax.
Ajax. Weak Achilles.
Thers. Weak indeed: God help you both!
Patroc. Come, this must be no quarrell.
Thers, There's no cause for't.
Patroc. He tells you true; you are both equall
Thers. Fools.
Achill. I can brook no comparisons.
Ajax. Nor I.
Achill. Well Ajax.
Ajax. Well Achilles.
Thers. So now they quarrell in Monosyllables: A word and a blow, and't be thy will.
Achill. You may hear more.
Ajax. I wou'd.
Achill. Expect,
Ajax. Farewell. Exeunt severally.
Therf. Curse on them, they want wine: your true fool will never fight without it. Or a drab a drab: Oh for a commodious Drabb betwixt 'em! wou'd Helen had been here! then it had come to something.
Dogs, Lyons, Bulls, for Females tear and gore:
And the Beast Man, is valiant for his whore. Exit Therſites.

ACT III. SCENE I.

Enter Therſites.

Therf. SHall the Idiot Ajax use me thus! he beats me and I rail at him: So worthy satisfaction! wou'd I cou'd beat him, and he ra il'd at me! Then there's Achilles, a rare Engineer: if Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves: Now the Plague on the whole Camp, or rather the Pox: for that's a curse dependent on those that fight as we do for a Cuckolds queen.—— What ho, my Lord Achilles.

Enter Patroclus.

Patroc. Who's there, Therſites! Good Therſites come in and rail.
Thers. aside. If I cou'd have remembred an Asse with gilt trappings, thou hadst not slip'd out of my contemplation. But 'tis no matter; thy self upon thy self: the common curse of mankiud, folly and ignorance be thine in great abundance: Heavens blesse thee from a Tutor; and discipline come not near thee.
I have said my prayers; and the devil Envy say Amen.
Where's Achilles!

Enter

Enter Achilles.

Who's there Therſites! why my digeſtion, why haſt thou not ſerv'd thy ſelf to my table, ſo many meals! come begin what's Agamemnon?

Thers. Thy Commander, Achilles: then tell me Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patro. Thy Benefactor Therſites; then tell me prithee what's thy ſelf?

Thers. Thy knower, Patroclus; then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patroc. Thou mayſt tell that know'ſt.

Achill. O, tell, tell. This muſt be very fooliſh: and I dye to have my ſpleen tickled.

Thers. I'le decline the whole queſtion. Agamemnon commands Achilles, Achilles is my Benefactor, I am Patroclus knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patroc. You Raſcal?

Achill. He's a priviledg'd man, proceed Therſites. Ha! ha! ha! prithee proceed while I am in the vein of laughing.

Therſit. And all theſe foreſaid men are fools: Agamemnon's a fool to offer to command Achilles: Achilles is a fool to be commanded by him, I am a fool to ſerve ſuch a fool, and Patroclus is a fool poſitive.

Patroc. Why am I a fool?

Therſi. Make that demand to Heaven, it ſuffices me thou art one.

Achill. Ha, ha, ha! O give me ribs of ſteel, or I ſhall ſplit with pleaſure: now play me Neſtor at a Night alarm: Mimick him rarely, make him cough and ſpet, and fumble with his gorget, and ſhake the rivits with his palſey hand; in and out, in and out, gad that's exceeding fooliſh.

Patroc. Neſtor ſhall not ſcape ſo, he has told us what we are; come what's Neſtor?

Therſi. Why he's an old wooden top, ſet up by father Time three hundred years ago, that hums to Agamemnon and Ulyſſes, and ſleeps to all the world beſides.

Achill. So let him ſleep for I'le no more of him: O my Patroclus, I but force a ſmile, Ajax has drawn the lot, and all the praiſe of Hector muſt be his.

Therſi. I hope to ſee his praiſe upon his ſhoulders, in blows and bruiſes, his arms, thighs, and body, all full of fame; ſuch fame as he gave me, and a wide hole at laſt full in his boſome, to let in day upon him, and diſcover the inſide of a fool.

Patroc. How he ſtruts in expectation of honour! he knows not what he does.

Therſi. Nay that's no wonder, for he never did.

Achill. Prithee ſay how he behaves himſelf?

Therſi. O you would be learning to practice, againſt ſuch another time.——Why he toſſes up his head as he had built Caſtles ith' ayr ; and he treads upward to 'em, ſtalks into th' Element, he ſurveys himſelf, as 'twere to look for Ajax: he wou'd be cry'd, for he has loſt himſelf, nay he knows no body ; I ſaid good morrow Ajax, and he replyed thanks Agamemnon.

Achill. Thou ſhalt be my Ambaſſador to him Therſites.

Therſi. No, I'le put on his perſon, let Patroclus make his demands to me, and you ſhall ſee the pageant of Ajax.

Achill. To him Patroclus, tell him I humbly deſire the valiant Ajax to invite the Noble Hector to my Tent: and to procure ſafe conduct for him from our Captain General Agamemnon.

Patroc. Jove bleſs the mighty Ajax!

Therſi. Humh!

Patroc. I come from the great Achilles.

Therſi. Ha!

Patroc. Who moſt humbly deſires you to invite Hector to his Tent.

Therſi. Humh!

Patroc. And to procure him ſafe conduct from Agamemnon.

Therſi. Agamemnon?

Patroc. I, my Lord.

Therſi. Ha!

Patro. What ſay you to't?

Therſi. Farewell with all my heart.

Patroc. Your anſwer Sir!

Therſi. If to morrow be a fair day, by eleven a clock it will go one way or tother, however he ſhall buy me dearly, fare you well with all my heart.

Achill. Why but he is not in this tune is he?

Therſi. No, but he's thus out of tune, what Muſick will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains I know not, nor I care not, but if emptineſs makes noiſe, his head will make melody.

Achill. My minde is troubled like a Fountain ſtir'd :
And I my ſelf ſee not the bottom on't.

Therſi. Wou'd the Fountain of his minde were clear ; that he might ſee an Aſs in't. [Aſide.] I had rather be a tick in a ſheep, than ſuch a valiant ignorance.

Enter Agamemnon, Ajax, Diomedes, Menelaus.

Patroc. Look who comes here.

Achill. Patroclus, I'le ſpeak with no body, come in after me Therſites.

Agam. Where's Achilles! [Exeunt Achill. Therſites.

Patro. Within, but ill diſpos'd my Lord.

Menel. We ſaw him at the opening of his Tent.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here.

Patroc. I ſhall ſay ſo to him, [Exit Patroclus.

Diom.

Diom. I know he is not ſick.

Ajax. Yes, Lyon ſick, ſick of a proud heart, you may call it melancholy if yo'll humour him: but on my honour 'tis no more than pride: and why ſhou'd he be proud?

Menel. Here comes Patroclus; but no Achilles with him.

Enter Patroclus.

Patroc. Achilles bids me tell you he is ſorry
If any thing more than your ſport and pleaſure
Did move you to this viſit: he's not well,
And begs you wou'd excuſe him, as unfit
For preſent buſineſs.

Agam. How! how's this Patroclus?
We are too well acquainted with theſe anſwers.
Though he has much deſert, yet all his vertues
Do in our eyes begin to loſe their gloſs.
We came to ſpeak with him; you ſhall not erre
If you return we think him over-proud
And under-honeſt. Tell him this; and adde,
That if he over-hold his price ſo much
We'll none of him: but let him like an Engine
Not portable, lye lagg of all the Camp.
A ſtirring Dwarf is of more uſe to us
Then is a ſleeping Gyant: tell him ſo.

Patroc. I ſhall; and bring his anſwer preſently.

Agam. I'le not be ſatisfi'd but by himſelf.
So tell him, Menelaus. Exeunt Menelaus. Patroclus.

Ajax. What's he more than another?

Agam. No more than what he thinks himſelf.

Ajax. Is he ſo much! do you not think he thinks himſelf a better Man than me?

Diom. No doubt he does.

Ajax. Do you think ſo?

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as ſtrong, as valiant; but much more courteous.

Ajax. Why ſhou'd a man be proud? I know not what pride is: I hate a proud man as I hate the ingendring of toads.

Diom. Aſide. 'Tis ſtrange he ſhould; and love himſelf ſo well.

Re-enter Menel.

Men. Achilles will not to the field to morrow.

Agam. What's his excuſe?

Men. Why he relies on none
But his own will; poſſeſt he is with vanity:
What ſhou'd I ſay, he is ſo plaguy proud
That the death tokens of it are upon him;
And bode there's no recovery.

Enter Ulysses, Nestor.

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so.
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles: shall that proud man
Be worship'd by a greater than himself,
One whom we hold our Idoll;
Shall Ajax go to him? No, Jove forbid,
And say in thunder, go to him Achilles.

Nest. [Aside.] O, this is well; he rubbs him where it itches.

Ajax. If I go to him with my Gantlet clench'd,
I'le dash him or'e the face.

Agam. O no, you shall not go.

Ajax. And'he be proud with me I'le cure his pride: a paltry
Insolent fellow!

Nest. How he describes himself?

Ulis. Aside. The crow chides blackness.——here is a man, but 'tis before his face, and therefore I am silent.

Nest. Wherefore are you? He is not envious as Achilles is.

Ulyss. Know all the world he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whorson dogg that shall palter thus with us! wou'd a were a Trojan.

Ulyss. Thank Heav'n my Lord, you're of a gentle nature,
Praise him that got you, her that brought you forth;
But he who taught you first the use of Armes,
Let Mars divide Eternity in two,
And give him half. I will not praise your wisedome.
Nestor shall do't; but pardon father Nestor,
Were you as green as Ajax, and your brain
Temper'd like his, you never shou'd excell him;
But be as Ajax is.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Ulyss. I, my good Son.

Diom. Be rul'd by him Lord Ajax.

Ulyss. There is no staying here; the Hart Achilles
Keeps thicket, please it our great General.
I shall impart a counsell, which observ'd
May cure this Madmans pride.

Agam. In my own tent our talk will be more private.

Ulyss. But nothing without Ajax:
He is the soul and substance of my councels,
And I am but his shadow.

Ajax. You shall see
I am not like Achilles,
Let us confer; and I'le give counsel too. [Exeunt Omnes.

SCENE

Pandarus, Troilus, Creſſida.

Pand. Come, come, what need you bluſh? ſhame's a babie; ſwear the oathes now to her, that you ſwore to me: what are you gone again? you muſt be watch'd ere you are made tame muſt you? why don't you ſpeak to her firſt!——Come draw this Curtain, and lets ſee your picture: alas a day, how loath you are to offend day-light!——(they kiſſe) that's well, that's well, nay you ſhall fight your hearts out ere I part you.——ſo ſo——ſo ſo——

Troil. You have bereft me of all words, fair Creſſida.

Pand. Words, pay no debts; give her deeds:——what billing again! here's in witneſs whereof the parties interchangeably —— come in, come in, you loſe time both.

Troil. O Creſſida, how often have I wiſh'd me here?

Creſſi. Wiſh'd my Lord!——the Gods grant! O my Lord.——

Troil. What ſhou'd they grant? what makes this pretty interruption in thy words?

Creſſi. I ſpeak I know not what!

Troil. Speak ever ſo; and if I anſwer you
I know not what, it ſhews the more of love.
Love is a child that talks in broken language,
Yet then he ſpeaks moſt plain.

Creſs. I finde it true, that to be wiſe and love
Are inconſiſtent things.

Pand. what bluſhing ſtill, have you not done talking yet!

Creſs. Well Unkle, what folly I commit, I detdcate to you.

Pand. I thank you for that: if my Lord get a boy of you, you'l give him me. Be true to my Lord, if he flinch Ile be hang'd for him——(Now am I in my kingdome! [aſide]

Troil. You know your pledges now, your Unkles word and my firm faith.

Pand. Nay Ile give my word for her too: our kindred are conſtant: they are burrs I can aſſure you, they'll ſtick where they are thrown.

Creſs. Boldneſs comes to me now, and I can ſpeak:
Prince Troylus, I have lov'd you long.

Troil. Why was my Creſſida then ſo hard to win?

Creſs. Hard to ſeem wonn; but I was wonn my Lord.
What have I blabb'd, who will be true to us,
When we are ſo unfaithful to our ſelves!
O bid me hold my tongue? for in this rapture
Sure I ſhall ſpeak what I ſhou'd ſoon repent.
But ſtop my mouth.

Troil.

Troil. A ſweet command; and willingly obey'd. [kiſſes]

Pand. Pretty I faith!

Creſs. My Lord I do beſeech you pardon me,
'Twas not my purpoſe thus to beg a kiſſe.
I am aſham'd: O heavens what have I done!
For this time let me take my leave, my Lord.

Pand. Leave! and you take leave till to morrow morning, call me Cut.

Creſs. Pray let me go.

Troil. Why what offends you, Madam?

Creſs. My own company.

Troil. You cannot ſhun your ſelf.

Creſs. Let me go and try:
I have a kind of ſelf reſides in you.

Troil. Oh that I thought truth cou'd be in a woman!
(As if it can, I will preſume in you)
That my integrity and faith might meet
The ſame return from her who has my heart.
How ſhou'd I be exaltted! but alas
I am more plain then dull ſimplicity!
And art leſs, as the infancy of truth.

Creſs. In that I muſt not yield to you my Lord.

Troil. All conſtant Lovers ſhall, in future Ages,
Approve their truth by Troylus: when their verſe
Wants ſimiles, as turtles to their mates:
Or true as flowing tides are to the Moon;
Earth to the Center: Iron to Adamant:
At laſt when truth is tir'd with repetition;
As true as Troylus ſhall crown up the verſe,
And ſanctify the Numbers.

Creſs. Prophet may you be!
If I am falſe, or ſwerve from truth of love,
When time is old, and has forgot it ſelf,
In all things elſe, let it remember me;
And after all compariſons of falſhood
To ſtabb the heart of perjury in Maids;
Let it be ſaid as falſe as Creſſida.

Pand. Go to, little ones: a bargain made: here I hold your hand, and here my Couſins: if ever you prove falſe to one another, after I have taken ſuch pains to bring you together: let all piti full goers between, be call'd to the worlds end after my name, Pandars.

Creſs. And will you promiſe that the holy Prieſt
Shall make us one for ever!

Pand.

Pand. Prieſts! marry hang 'em! they make you one! go in, go in, and make your ſelves one without a prieſt: I'le have no prieſts work in my houſe.

Creſs. Ile not conſent unleſs you ſwear.

Pand. I, do, do, ſwear; a pretty woman's worth an oath at any time. Keep or break as time ſhall try; but 'tis good to ſwear, for the ſaving of her credit: Hang e'm ſweet Rogues they never expect a Man ſhou'd keep it. Let him but ſwear, and that's all they care for.

Troil. Heavens proſper me as I devoutly ſwear,
Never to be but yours.

Pand. Whereupon I will lead you into a chamber: and ſuppoſe there be a bed in't; as I ſack, I know not: but you'll forgive me, if there be: away, away, you naughty hildings: get ye together, get you together. Ah you wags, do you leer indeed at one another! do the neyes twinkle at him! get you together, get you together.

[Leads them out.

Enoter at one door Æneas with a Torch, at another Hector, Diomede with Torches,

Hect. So ho; who goes there? Æneas!

Æneas. Prince Hector!

Diom. Good morrow Lord Æneas.

Hect. A valiant Greek, Æneas; take his hand;
Witneſſe the proceſſe of your ſpeech within;
You told how Diomede a whole week by days
Did haunt you in the field.

Æneas. Health to you, valiant Sir,
During all buſineſs of the gentle truce;
But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance
As heart can think, or courage execute.

Diom. Both one and to'ther, Diomede embraces.
Our bloods are now in calm; and ſo, long health;
But when contention, and occaſion meets,
By Jove I'le play the hunter for thy life,
Eneas. And thou ſhalt hunt a Lyou that will fly
With his face backward: welcome Diomede
Welcome to Troy: now by Anchiſes Soul
No man alive can love in ſuch a ſort
The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

Diom. We know each other well.

Æne. We do; and long to know each other worſe
To Hect. my Lord, the King has ſent for me in haſte:
Know you the reaſon?

Hect. Yes: his purpoſe meets you.
It was to bring this Greek to Colchas's houſe;

Where

Where Pandarus his Brother, and his Daughter
Fair Creſſida reſide: and there to render
For our Anthenor, now redeem'd from priſon,
The Lady Creſſida:
Æne. What! Has the King reſolv'd to gratifie
That Traytor Colchos; who forſook his Country,
And turn'd to them, by giving up this pledge?
Hect. The bitter diſpoſition of the time
Is ſuch, though Colchos as a fugitive
Deſerve it not, that we muſt free Anthenor
On whoſe wiſe Counſels, we can moſt rely:
And therefore Creſſida muſt be return'd.
Æne. A word my Lord——(Your pardon Diomede)
Your Brother Troylus, to my certain knowledg,
Does lodge this night in Pandarus his houſe:
Hect. Go you before: tell him of our approach
Which will I fear be much
Unwelcome to him.
Æne. I aſſure you
Troylus had rather Troy were born to Greece
Than Creſſida from Troy.
Hect. I know it well: and how he is beſide,
Of haſty blood:
Æne. He will not hear me ſpeak:
But I have noted long betwixt you two
A more than Brothers love: an awfull homage
The fiery youth pays to your elder vertue.
Hect. Leave it to me; I'le manage him alone:
Attend you Diomede; My Lord good morrow: [to Diomed.
An urgent buſineſs takes me from the pleaſure
Your company affords me; but Æneas
With joy will undertake to ſerve you here,
And to ſupply my room.
Æneas to Diomed. My Lord I wait you. Exeunt ſeverally.

[Diomede with Æneas; Hector at another door.

Enter Pandarus: a Servant: Muſick.

Pand. Softly, villain, ſoftly; I would not for half Troy the Lovers ſhould be diſturb'd under my roof; liſten rogue, liſten, do they breathe?
Serv. Yes, Sir, I hear by ſome certain ſignes, the are both awaken.
Pand. That's as it ſhou'd be: that's well aboth ſides: [liſtens]
Yes faith they are both alive:———there was a creake! there was a creake: they are both alive and alive like; there was a creake: a ha boyes!——Is the muſick ready?

Serv.

Serv. Shall they ſtrike up Sir!

Pand. Art thou ſure they do not know the parties?

Serv. They play to the Man in the Moon for ought they know.

Pand. To the Man in the Moon, ah Rogue! do they ſo indeed Rogue! I underſtand, thee: thou art a wag; thou art a wagg. Come towze rowze! in the name of love, ſtrike up boys!

Muſick. and then Song: during which Pandarus liſtens.

Song. Can life be a bleſſing,
Or worth the poſſeſſing,
Can life be a bleſſing if love were away?
Ah no! though our love all night keep us waking,
And though he torment us with cares all the day,
Yet he ſweetens he ſweetens our pains in the taking,
There's an hour at the laſt, there's an hour to repay.

In every poſſeſſing,
The raviſhing bleſſing,
In every poſſeſſing the fruit of our pain,
Poor lovers forget long ages of anguiſh,
What're they have ſuffer'd and done to obtain;
'Tis a pleaſure, a pleaſure to ſigh and to languiſh,
When we hope, when we hope to be happy again.

Pand. Put up, and vaniſh; they are coming out; what a ferrup, will you play when the dance is done? I ſay vaniſh. Exit Muſick.

Peeping. Good Ifaith; good ifarth! what hand in hand!——— a fair quarrell, well ended! do, do, walk him, walk him; A good girl, a diſcreet girl: I ſee ſhe'll make the moſt of him.

Enter Troil. and Creſſida.

Troil. Farewell, my life! leave me and back to bed:
Sleep ſeal thoſe pretty eyes;
And tye thy ſences in as ſoft a band
As Infants voyd of thought.

Pandar. ſhewing himſelf. How now, how now, how go matters! hear you Maid, hear you; where's my Couſin Creſſida?

Creſs. Go hang your ſelf you naughty mocking Unkle:
You bring me to do ill and then you jeere me!

Pand. What ill have I brought you to do? ſay what if you dare now! My Lord have I brought her to do ill?

Creſs. Come, come, beſhrew your heart; you'll neither be good your ſelf, nor ſuffer others.

Pand. Alas poor wench; alas poor Devil; haſt not ſlept to night? wou'd not (a naughty Man) let it ſleep one twinkle! Ah bugbear take him!

Knock within. Creſs. Who's that at door? good Uncle go and ſee: My Lord come you again into my chamber!
You ſmile and mock as if I meant naughtily!

Troil. Indeed, indeed!

Creſs. Come y'are deceiv'd; I think of no ſuch thing:

Knock again. How earneſtly they knock, pray come in:
I wou'd not for all Troy, you were ſeen here. [Exeunt Troil. Creſſida.

Pand. Who's there! whats the matter!
Will you beat down the houſe there!

Enter Hector.

Hect. Good morrow my Lord Pandarus; good morrow!

Pand. Who's there, Prince Hector! what news with you ſo early?

Hect. Is not my Brother Troilus here?

Pand. Here! what ſhou'd he do here?

Hect. Come he is here my Lord, do not deny him:
It does import him much to ſpeak with me.

Pand. Is he here ſay you? 'tis more than I know, I'le be ſworn! For my own part I came in late!—what ſhou'd he do here?

Hect. Come, come you do him wrong ere y'are aware; you'll be ſo true to him, that you'll be falſe to him: you ſhall not know he's here; but yet go fetch him hither:—goe. [Exit Pandarus.

Enter Troilus.

I bring you Brother, moſt unwelcome news;
But ſince of force you are to hear it told,
I thought a friend and Brother beſt might tell it:
Therefore, before I ſpeak, arm well your mind
And think y'are to be touch'd ev'n to the quick;
That ſo, prepar'd for ill you may be leſs
Surpris'd to hear the worſt.

Troil. See Hector, what it is to be your Brother,
I ſtand prepar'd already.

Hect. Come, you are not,
I know you Troilus, you are hot and fiery:
You kindle at a wrong; and catch it quick
As ſtubble does the flame.

Troil. 'Tis heat of blood
And raſhneſs of my youth; I'le mend that errour:
Begin and try my temper.

Hect. Can you think
Of that one thing which moſt cou'd urge your anger
Drive you to madneſs, plunge you in deſpair,

And make you hate ev'n me?
Troil. There can be nothing.
I love you Brother, with that awful love
I bear to Heav'n, and to ſuperior vertue,
And when I quit this love you muſt be that
Which Hector near can be.
Hect. Remember well
What you have ſaid: for when I claim your promiſe
I ſhall expect performance.
Troil. I am taught:
I will not rage.
Hect. Nor grieve beyond a man.
Troil. I won'not be a woman.
Hect. Do not Brother:
And I will tell my news, in terms ſo mild,
So tender, and ſo fearful to offend
As Mothers uſe to ſooth their froward Babes;
Nay I will ſwear as you have ſworn to me,
That if ſome guſt of paſſion ſwell your ſoul
To words intemperate, I will bear with you.
Troil. What wou'd this pomp of preparation mean
Come you to bring me news of Priams death
Or Hecuba's.
Hect. The Gods forbid I ſhou'd:
But what I bring is nearer you, more cloſe,
An ill more yours.
Troil. There is but one that can be.
Hect. Perhaps 'tis that.
Troil. I'le not ſuſpect my fate
So far, I know I ſtand poſſeſt of that.
Hect. 'Tis well: conſider at whoſe houſe I finde you.
Troil. Ha!
Hect. Does it ſtart you! I muſt wake you more:
Anthenor is exchang'd.
Troil. For whom.
Hect. Imagine.
Troil. It comes like thunder grumbling in a cloud,
Before the dreadfull break: if here it fall,
The ſubtile flame will lick up all my blood,
And in a moment turn my heart to aſhes.
Hect. That Creſſida for Anthenor is exchang'd
Becauſe I knew 'twas harſh I wou'd not tell;
Not all at once; but by degrees and glimpſes
I let it in, leſt it might ruſh upon you
And quite orepower your Soul: in this I think

I ſhow'd a friend: your part muſt follow next:
Which is, to curb your choler, tame your grief,
And bear it like a man.
Troil. I think I do
That I yet live to hear you: but no more:
Hope for no more: for ſhou'd ſome Goddeſs offer
To give her ſelf and all her Heaven in change,
I wou'd not part with Creſſida: ſo return
This anſwer as my laſt.
Hect. 'Twill not be taken:
Nor will I bear ſuch news.
Troil. You bore me worſe.
Hect. Worſe for your ſelf; not for the general ſtate,
And all our common ſafety, which depends
On free'd Anthenors wiſdome.
Troil. You wou'd ſay
That I'm the Man mark'd out to be unhappy;
And made the publick Sacrifice for Troy.
Hect. I wou'd ſay ſo indeed: for can you finde
A fate more glorious than to be that victime?
If parting from a Miſtriſs can procure
A Nations happineſs, ſhow me that Prince
Who dares to truſt his future fame ſo farr
To ſtand the ſhock of Annals, blotted thus
He ſold his Country for a womans love?
Troil. O, ſhe's my life, my being, and my Soul!
Hect. Suppoſe ſhe were, which yet I will not grant,
You ought to give her up.
Troil. For whom!
Hect. The publick.
Troil. And what are they that I ſhou'd give up her
To make them happy? let me tell you Brother,
The publick, is the Lees of vulgar ſlaves:
Slaves, with the minds of ſlaves: ſo born, ſo bred:
Yet ſuch as theſe united in a herd
Are call'd the publique: Millions of ſuch Cyphers
Make up the publique ſum: an Eagles life
Is worth a world of Crows: are Princes made
For ſuch as theſe, who, were one Soul extracted
From all their beings, cou'd not raiſe a Man.—
Hect. And what are we, but for ſuch men as theſe?
'Tis adoration, ſome ſay makes a God:
And who ſhou'd pay it, where wou'd be their Altars
Were no inferiour creatures here on Earth?
Ev'n thoſe who ſerve have their expectances;

Degrees of happineſs, which they muſt ſhare,
Or they'll refuſe to ſerve us.
Troil. Let e'm have it.
Let e'm eat, drink and ſleep; the only uſe
They have of life:
Hect. You take all theſe away,
Unleſs you give up Creſſida.
Troil. Forbear;
Let Paris give up Hellen: ſhe's the cauſe,
And root of all this miſchief.
Hect. Your own ſuffrage
Condemns you there: you voted for her ſtay.
Troil. If one muſt ſtay, the other ſha'not go.
Hect. She ſha'not?
Troil. Once again, I ſay ſhe ſhall not.
Hect. Our Father has decree'd it otherwiſe.
Troil. No matter.
Hect. How! no matter Troylus?
A King, and fathers will!
Troil. When 'tis unjuſt.
Hect. Come ſhe ſhall go.
Troil. She ſhall? then I am dar'd.
Hect. If nothing elſe will do.
Troil. Anſwer me firſt;
And then Ile anſwer that: be ſure I will;
Whoſe hand ſeal'd this exchange?
Hect. My Fathers firſt;
Then all the Council's after.
Troil. Was yours there?
Hect. Mine was there too.
Troil. Then you'r no more my friend:
And for your ſake now mark me what I ſay,
She ſhall not go.
Hect. Go to, you are a boy.
Troil. A Boy! Im'e glad I am not ſuch a Man,
Not ſuch as thou; a traytor to thy Brother:
Nay more, thy friend: but friend's a Sacred name,
Which none but brave and honeſt men ſhou'd wear;
In thee 'tis vile; 'tis proſtitute: 'tis Ayr;
And thus I puffe it from me.
Hect. Well, young Man,
Since I'me no friend (and oh that ere I was
To one ſo far unworthy) bring her out,
Or by our Fathers Soul, of which no part
Did ere deſcend to thee, Ile force her hence.

Troil.

Troil. I laugh at thee.
Hect. Thou dar'ſt not.
Troil. I dare more,
If urg'd beyond my temper: prove my daring,
And ſee which of us has the larger ſhare
Of our great Fathers Soul.
Hect. No more, thou knowſt me.
Troil. I do; and know my ſelf.
Hect. All this ye Gods,
And for the Daughter of a fugitive,
A Traytor to his Country!
Troil. 'Tis too much.
Hect. By Heaven too little; for I think her common,
Troil. How, Common!
Hect. Common as the tainted ſhambles,
Or as the duſt we tread.
Troil. By Heaven as chaſte as thy Andromache.

Hector lays his hand on Troylus his Arm;
and Troylus does the ſame to him.

Hect. What! nam'ſt thou them together!
Troil. No; I do not:
For Creſſida is firſt: as chaſte as ſhe,
But much more fair.
Hect. O patience, patience, Heaven!
Thou tempt'ſt me ſtrangely: ſhou'd I kill thee now,
I know not if the Gods can be offended
Or think I ſlew a Brother; but be gone,
Be gone, or I ſhall ſhake thee into Atomes:
Thou know'ſt I can.
Troil. I care not if you cou'd.
Hect. walking off. I thank ye Gods for calling to my minde
My promiſe that no words of thine ſhou'd urge me,
Beyond the bounds of reaſon: But in thee
'Twas brutall baſeneſs, ſo forewarn'd to fall
Beneath the name of man: to ſpurn my kindneſs;
And when I offer'd thee (thou knowſt how loth!)
The wholſome bitter cup o' friendly counſel
To daſh it in my face: farewel, farewel.
Ungratefull as thou art: hereafter uſe
The name of Brother; but of friend no more. [going out.
Troil. Wilt thou not break yet heart? ſtay Brother, ſtay.
I promis'd too, but I have broke my vow,
And you keep yours too well.

Hect.

Hect. What wouldſt thou more ?
Take heed, young man how you too far provoke me!
For Heaven can witneſs 'tis with much conſtraint
That I preſerve my faith.
Troil. Elſe you wou'd kill me;
Hect. By all the Gods I wou'd.
Troil. I'me ſatisfi'd.
You have condemn'd me, and Ile do't my ſelf;
What's life to him, who has no uſe of life?
A barren purchaſe, held upon hard terms!
For I have loſt (oh what have I not loſt!)
The faireſt, deareſt, kindeſt of her Sex,
And loſt her ev'n by him, by him, ye Gods,
Who only cou'd, and only ſhou'd protect me!
And if I had a joy beyond that love,
A friend, have loſt him too!
Hect. Speak that again:
(For I cou'd hear it ever:) ſaidſt thou not
That if thou hadſt a joy beyond that love
It was a friend? O ſaydſt thou not a friend!
That doubting if was kinde: then thou'rt divided;
And I have ſtill ſome part,
Troil. If ſtill you have
You do not care to have it.
Hect. How, not care!
Troil. No, Brother, care not.
Hect. Am I but thy Brother!
Troil. You told me I muſt call you friend no more.
Hect. How far my words were diſtant from my heart!
Know when I told thee ſo I lov'd thee moſt.
Alas! it is the uſe of human frailty
To fly to worſt extremities with thoſe
To whom we moſt are kind.
Troil. Is't poſſible!
Then you are ſtill my friend!
Hect. Heaven knows I am!
Troil. And can forgive the Sallies of my paſſion?
For I have been too blame: oh much too blame:
Have ſaid ſuch words, nay done ſuch actions too,
(Baſe as I am) that my aw'd, conſcious Soul
Sinks in my breaſt, nor dare I lift an eye
On him I have offended.
Hect. Peace be to thee
And calmneſs ever there. I blame thee not:

I know thou lov'ſt; and what can love not do!
I caſt the wild diſorderly account
Of all thy words and deeds on that mad paſſion;
I pity thee, indeed I pity thee:
Troil. Do; for I need it: let me lean my head
Upon thy boſome; all my peace dwells there;
Thou art ſome God, or much much more then man!
Hect. Alas! to loſe the joys of all thy youth,
One who deſerv'd thy love!
Troil. Did ſhe deſerve?
Hect. She did.
Troil. Then ſure ſhe was no common creature.
Hect. I ſaid it in my rage, I thought not ſo.
Troil. That thought has bles'd me! but to loſe this love
After long pains, and after ſhort poſſeſſion.
Hect. I feel it for thee: Let me go to Priam,
I'le break this treaty off; or let me fight;
I'le be thy champion; and ſecure both her
And thee, and Troy.
Troil. It muſt not be, my Brother!
For then your errour would be more then mine:
I'le bring her forth, and you ſhall bear her hence;
That you have pitied me is my reward.
Hect. Go then; and the good gods reſtore her to thee,
And with her all the quiet of thy minde;
The triumph of this kindeneſs be thy own;
And heaven and earth this teſtimony yield,
That Friendſhip never gain'd a nobler field. Exeunt ſeverally.

ACT.

ACT IV. SCENE I.

Enter Pandarus, Creſſida meeting.

Pand. I'St poſſible! no ſooner got but loſt! The devil take Antenor: the young Prince will go mad: A plague upon Anthenor! wou'd they had broke's neck.

Creſſi. How now! what's the matter! who was here!

Pand. Oh, oh!

Creſſi. Why ſigh you ſo! O where's my Troilus? tell me ſweet Uncle what's the matter?

Pand. Wou'd I were as deep under the earth, as I am above it!

Creſſi. Oh the Gods, what's the matter?

Pand. Prithee get thee in, wou'd thou hadſt never been born! I knew thou woud'ſt be his death; oh poor Gentleman! A plague upon Antenor?

Creſſi. Good Uncle, I beſeech you on my knees, tell me what's the matter?

Pand. Thou muſt be gone girl; thou muſt be gone, to the fugitive Rogue Prieſt thy father, (and he's my brother too, but that's all one at this time:) a pox upon Antenor.?

Creſſi. O ye immortal Gods, I will not go.

Pand. Thou muſt, thou muſt?

Creſſi. I will not: I have quite forgot my father; I have no touch of birth; no ſpark of Nature: No kinn, no blood, no life; nothing ſo near me As my dear Troilus?

Enter Troilus.

Pand. Here, here, here, he comes ſweet Duck!

Creſſi. O Troilus, Troilus! [They both weep over each other, ſhe running into his armes.

Pand. What a pair of Spectacles is here! let me embrace too: Oh heart, ſings (as the ſaying is) O heart, heavy heart, why ſighſt thou without breaking (where he anſwers again) becauſe thou canſt not eaſe thy ſmart, by friendſhip nor by ſpeaking, there was never a truer rhime; let us caſt away nothing; for we may live to have need of ſuch a verſe: we ſee it, we ſee it, how now lambs?

Troil. Creſſida, I love thee with ſo ſtrange a purity That the bleſt Gods, angry with my devotions More bright in zeal, than that I pay their Altars, Will take thee from my ſight?

Creſſi. Have the Gods envy?

Pand. I, I, I, 'tis too plain a caſe!

Cressi. And is it true, that I must go from Troy?
Troil. A hastefull truth?
Cressi. What, and from Troilus too?
Troil. From Troy and Troilus: and suddenly.
So suddenly 'tis counted but by minutes.
Cressi. What not an hour allow'd for taking leave?
Troil. Ev'n that's bereft us too: our envious fates
Justle betwixt, and part the dear adieus
Of meeting lips, clasp'd hands, and lock'd embraces.

Æneas within.

My Lord, is the Lady ready yet?
Troil. Hark, you are call'd: some say the Genius so
Cryes come, to him who instantly must dye.
Pand. Where are my tears! some rain to'lay this wind:
Or my heart will be blown up by th' roots!
Troil. Hear me my Love! be thou but true like me.
Cressi. I true! how now, what wicked thought is this?
Troil. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,
For it is parting from us:
I spoke not, be thou true, as fearing thee;
But be thou true, I said to introduce
My following protestation: be thou true,
And I will see thee.
Cressi. You'll be expos'd to dangers.
Troil. I care not: but be true.
Cressi. Be true again?
Troil. Hear why I speak it love.
The Grecian Youths are full of Grecian Arts:
Alas a kind of holy jealousie
Which I beseech you call a vertuous sin,
Makes me afraid how far you may be tempted.
Cressi. O Heavens, you love me not!
Troil Dye I, a villain then!
In this I do not call your faith in question
But my own merit.
Cressi. Fear not; I'le be true.
Troil. Then fate thy worst; for I will see thee love
Not all the Grecian host shall keep me out,
Nor Troy, though wall'd with fire, shou'd hold me in.

Æneas within.

My Lord, my Lord Troilus: I must call you.
Pand. A mischief call him: nothing but Schreechowls? do, do, call again; you had best part 'em now in the sweetness of their love! I'le be hang'd if this Æneas be the Son of Venus, for all his bragging.

Honest

Honeſt Venus was a Punk: wou'd ſhe have parted Lovers: no he has not a drop of Venus blood in him: honeſt Venus was a Punk.

Troil. To Pand. Prithee go out; and gain one minute more.

Pand. Marry and I will: follow you your buſineſs; loſe no time, 'tis very precious; go, Bill again: I'le tell the Rogue his own I warrant him. [Exit Pandarus.

Creſſi. What have we gain'd by this one minute more?

Troil. Only to wiſh another, and another
A longer ſtruggling with the pangs of death.

Creſſi. O thoſe who do not know what parting is
Can never learn to dye!

Troil When I but think this ſight may be our laſt,
If Jove cou'd ſet me in the place of Atlas
And lay the weight of Heav'n and Gods upon me
He cou'd not preſſe me more.

Creſſi. Oh let me go that I may know my grief;
Grief is but gueſs'd, while thou art ſtanding by:
But I too ſoon ſhall know what abſence is.

Troil. Why 'tis to be no more: another name for death.
'Tis the Sunn parting from the frozen North;
And I, me thinks, ſtand on ſome Icey cliff,
To watch the laſt low circles that he makes;
Till he ſink down from Heav'n! O only Creſſida,
If thou depart from me, I cannot live:
I have not ſoul enough to laſt for grief,
But thou ſhalt hear what grief has done with me.

Creſſi. If I could live to hear it, I were falſe,
But as a careful traveller who fearing
Aſſaults of Robbers, leaves his wealth behind,
I truſt my heart with thee; and to the Greeks
Bear but an empty Casket.

Troil. Then, I will live; that I may keep that treaſure:
And arm'd with this aſſurance, let thee go
Looſe, yet ſecure as is the gentle Hawk
When whiſtled off ſhe mounts into the wind:
Our love's, like Mountains high above the clouds,
Though winds and tempeſts beat their aged feet,
Their peaceful heads nor ſtorm nor thunder know,
But ſcorn the threatning rack that roles below,

Exeunt Ambo.

SCENE II.

Achilles and Patroclus, ſtanding in their Tent.

Ulyſſes, Agamemnon, Menelaus, Neſtor, Ajax, paſſing over the Stage.

Ulyſſ. Achilles ſtands in th'entrance of his Tent:
Pleaſe it our General to paſs ſtrangely by him,
As if he were forgot, and Princes all
Look on him with neglectful eyes and ſcorn:
Pride muſt be cur'd by pride.
Agam. We'll execute your purpoſe, and put on
A form of ſtrangneſs as we paſs along
So do each Prince either ſalute him not
Or elſe diſdainfully, which will ſhake him more
Then if not look'd on: I will lead the way.
Achill. What, comes the General to ſpeak with me!
You know my mind; I'll fight no more with Troy.
Agam. What ſays Achilles, wou'd he ought with us?
Neſt. Wou'd you, my Lord, ought with the General!
Achill. No.
Neſt. Nothing my Lord.
Agam. The better.
Menel. How do you, how do you!
Achill. What does the Cuckold ſcorn me!
Ajax. How now Patroclus!
Achill. Good morrow Ajax.
Ajax. Ha!
Achill. Good morrow.
Ajax. I; and good next day too.

[Exeunt all but Achilles, and Patroclus.

Achill. What mean theſe fellows! know they not Achilles?
Patroc. They paſs by ſtrangely; they were us'd to bow;
And ſend their ſmiles before 'em to Achilles,
To come as humbly as they us'd to creep, to holy Altars.
Achill. Am I poor of late!
'Tis certain, greatneſs once fall'n out with fortune
Muſt fall out with men too! what the declind is
He ſhall as ſoon read in the eyes of others
As feel in his own fall: for men like butter-flyes,
Show not their mealy wings but to the Summer.
Patroc. 'Tis known you are in love with Hector's Siſter,
And therefore will not fight: and your not fighting

Draws

Draws on you this contempt: I oft have told you
A woman impudent and manniſh grown
Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man,
In time of action: I'm condemn'd for this:
They think my little appetite to warr
Deads all the fire in you: but rowſe your ſelf,
And love ſhall from your neck unlooſe his folds;
Or like a dew drop from a Lyons Mane
Be ſhaken into ayr.

Achill. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patrocl. Yes, and perhaps ſhall gain much honour by him.

Achill. I ſee my reputation is at ſtake.

Patroc. O then beware, thoſe wounds heal ill that men have giv'n themſelves, becauſe they give e'm deepeſt.

Achill. I'le do ſomething:
But what I know not yet,——No more our Champion.

Re-enter Ajax, Agamemnon, Menelaus, Ulyſſes, Neſt. Diomede, Trumpet.

Agam. Here art thou daring combat, valiant Ajax.
Give with thy Trumpet, a loud note to Troy,
Thou Noble Champion, that the ſounding ayr
May pierce the ears of the great challenger,
And call him hither.

Ajax. Trumpet take that purſe:
Now crack thy lungs, and ſplit the ſounding braſs;
Thou blow'ſt for Hector.

[Trumpet ſounds, and is anſwer'd from within.

Enter Hector, Æneas, and other Trojans.

Agam. Yonder comes the Troop.

Æneas, coming to the Greeks.

Health to the Grecian Lords; what ſhall be done
To him that ſhall be vanquiſh'd? or do you purpoſe,
A Victor ſhould be known! will you the Knights,
Shall to the edg of all extremity,
Purſue each other, or ſhall be divided
By any voice or order of the field;
Hector bad ask.

Agam. Which way wou'd Hector have it?

Æne. He cares not, he'il obey conditions.

Achill. 'Tis done like Hector but ſecurely done;
A little proudly, and too much diſpiſing
The Knight oppos'd, he might have found his match.

Æne. If not Achilles, Sir, what is your name!

Achill. If not Achilles nothing.

Æne. Therefore Achilles, but who ere know this;
Great Hector knows no pride, weigh him but well,
And that which looks like pride is courteſy.
This Ajax is half made of Hectors blood,
In love whereof half Hector ſtays at home;

Achill. A Maiden battle! I perceive you then.

Agam. Go Diomede, and ſtand by valiant Ajax:
As you and Lord Æneas ſhall conſent,
So let the fight proceed or terminate.

[The Trumpets ſound on both ſides, while Æneas and Diomede take their places, as Judges of the Field: The Trojans and Grecians rank themſelves on either ſide.

Ulyſs. They are oppos'd already.

[Fight equal at firſt, then Ajax has Hector at diſadvantage: at laſt Hector cloſes, Ajax falls on one knee, Hector ſtands over him but ſtriks not, and Ajax riſes.

Æneas throwing his Gantlet betwixt them.

Princes enough, you both have ſhown much valour.

Diomede. And we as Judges of the Field declare;
The combat here ſhall ceaſe.

Ajax. I am not warm yet, let us fight again.

Æne. Then let it be as Hector ſhall determine.

Hect. If it be left to me, I will no more.
Ajax, thou art my Aunt Heſion's Son;
The Obligation of our blood forbids us.
But were thy mixture Greek and Trojan ſo,
That thou cou'dſt ſay, this part is Grecian all
And this is Trojan, hence thou ſhou'dſt not bear
One Grecian limb, wherein my pointed Sword
Had not impreſſion made, but Heav'n forbid
That any drop thou borrowſt from my Mother,
Shou'd ere be draind by me, let me embrace thee Couſin:
By him who thunders thou haſt ſinnewy arms,
Hector wou'd have 'em fall upon him thus:—[Embrace]
Thine be the honour, Ajax.

Ajax. I thank thee Hector,
Thou art too gentle, and too free a Man:
I came to kill thee Couſin, and to gain
A great addition from that glorious act:
But thou haſt quite diſarm'd me.

Hect. I am glad.

For 'tis the only way I cou'd disarm thee.
Ajax. If I might in intreaty finde succes,
I wou'd desire to see thee at my Tent.
Diom. 'Tis Agamemnons wish, and great Achilles,
Both long to see the valiant Hector there.
Hect. Æneas, call my Brother Troilus to me;
And you two signe this friendly enterview.
[Agamemnon, and the chief of both sides approach.
Agam. to Hect. Worthy of Arms, as welcome as to one
Who wou'd be rid of such an Enemy.
To Troil. My well fam'd Lord of Troy, no less to you.
Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan seen thee often
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way,
Through ranks of Grecian youth, and I have seen thee
As swift as lightning spur thy Phrygian Steed,
And seen thee scorning many forfeit lives,
When thou hast hung thy advanc'd Sword ith' ayr,
Not leting it decline, on prostrate foes:
That I have said to all the standers by
Lo Jove is yonder, distributing life.
Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old Chronicle,
Who hast so long walkt hand in hand with time:
Most Reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.
Ulyss. I wonder now, how yonder City stands,
When we have here, her base and pillar by us.
Hect. I know your count'nance, Lord Ulysses well;
Ah Sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
Since first I saw your self and Diomede,
In Ilion, on your Greekish Embassy.
Achill. Now Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee;
I have with exact view perus'd thee Hector,
And quoted joint by joint.
Hect. Is this Achilles!
Achill. I am Achilles.
Hect. Stand fair, I prithee let me look on thee.
Achill. Behold thy fill.
Hect. Nay, have done already.
Achill. Thou art too brief, I will the second time
As I wou'd buy thee, view thee limb by limb.
Hect. O, like a Book of sport thou read'st me ore;
But there's more in me then thou understand'st.
Achill. Tell me ye Heav'ns, in which part of his body
Shall destroy him? there, or there, or there!
That I may give th' imagin'd wound a name,
And make distinct the very breach, whereout

Hectors great ſpirit flew! anſwer me Heavens!

Hect. Wert thou an Oracle to tell me this!
I'de not believe thee, henceforth guard thee well,
I'le kill thee every where:
Ye Noble Grecians pardon me this boaſt,
His inſolence draws folly from my lips,
But I'le endeavour deeds to match theſe words;
Elſe may I never.——

Ajax. Do not chafe thee Couſin,
And you Achilles let theſe threats alone:
You may have every day enough of Hector,
If you have ſtomack, the General State I fear
Can ſcarce intreat you to perform your boaſt.

Hect. I pray you let us ſee you in the field;
We have had paltry Wars, ſince you refus'd
The Grecian cauſe.

Achill. Doſt thou entreat me Hector!
To morrow will I meet thee fierce as death;
To Night all peace.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match.

Agam. Firſt all you Grecian Princes go with me,
And entertain great Hector, afterwards,
As his own leaſure, ſhall concur with yours,
You may invite him to your ſeveral Tents.

[Exeunt Agam. Hect. Menel. Neſtor, Diomede, together.

Troil. My Lord Ulyſſes.
Tell me I beſeech you;
In what part of the field does Calchas lodg!

Ulyſs. At Menelaus Tent;
There Diomede does feaſt with him to Night:
Who neither looks on Heaven or on Earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view,
On Creſſida alone.

Troil. Shall I, brave Lord be bound to you ſo much
After we part from Agamemnons Tent.
To bring me thither!

Ulyſs. I ſhall wait on you.
As freely tell me, of what honour was
This Creſſida in Troy? had ſhe no Lovers there
Who mourn her abſence?

Troil. O Sir, to ſuch as boaſting ſhow their ſcars,
Reproof is due, ſhe lov'd and was belov'd:
That's all I muſt impart. Lead on my Lord.

[Exeunt Ulyſſes Troilus.

Achill. to Patro. I'le heat his blood with Greckiſh wine to Night,

Which

Which with my Sword I mean to cool to morrow.
Patroclus, let us feaſt him to the height.

Enter Therſites.

Patro. Here comes Therſites.

Achill. How now thou core of envy,
Thou cruſty batch of Nature, what's the news?

Thers. Why thou picture of what thou ſeemſt, thou Idoll of Ideot worſhippers, there's a Letter for thee.

Achill. From whence fragment?

Thers. Why thou full diſh of fool, from Troy.

Patroc. Well ſaid adverſity! what makes thee ſo keen to day?

Thers. Becauſe a fool's my whetſtone.

Patro. Meaning me?

Thers. Yes meaning thy no meaning; prithee be ſilent, boy, I profit not by thy talk: Now the rotten diſeaſes of the South, gut gripings, ruptures, Catarrhs; loads of gravell in the back, Lethargies, cold palſies, and the like, take thee, and take thee again; thou green Sarcenet flap for a ſore eye, thou taſſell of a prodigals purſe, thou: Ah how the poor world is peſter'd with ſuch water-flys: ſuch diminitives of nature.

Achill. My dear Patroclus, I am quite prevented
From my great purpoſe, bent on Hector's life:
Here is a Letter from my love Polixena,
Both taxing, and ingaging me to keep
An Oath that I have ſworn: and will not break it
To ſave all Greece: let honour go or ſtay,
There's more Religion in my love than fame:

Exeunt Achilles, Patroclus.

Thers. With too much blood, and too little brain, theſe two are running mad before the dog-days. There's Agamemnon too, an honeſt fellow enough, and loves a brimmer heartily; but he has not ſo much brains as an old gander. But his brother Menelaus, there's a fellow: the goodly transformation of Jupiter when he lov'd Europa: the primitive Cuckold: A vile Monkey ty'd eternally to his brothers table. To be a Dog, a Mule, a Cat, a toad, an Owle, a Lizard, a Herring without a roe, I wou'd not care: but to be Menelaus I wou'd conſpire againſt deſtiny——Hey day! will with a wiſpe, and Jack a lanthorn!

Hector, Ajax, Agamemnon, Diomede, Uliſſes, Troilus, going with torches over the ſtage.

Agam. We go wrong; we go wrong.

Ajax No, yonder 'tis; there where we ſee the light.

Hect. I trouble you.

Ajax. Not at all Couſin: Here comes Achilles himſelf to guide us.

Enter Achilles.

Achill. Welcome brave Hector, welcome princes all:

Agam. So now, brave Prince of Troy, I take my leave; Ajax commands the guard, to wait on you.

Men. Good night my Lord!

Hect. Good night Sweet Lord Menelaus.

Therſ. aſide. Sweet quoth a! ſweet Sink, ſweet ſhore, ſweet Jakes!

Achill. Neſtor will ſtay; and you Lord Diomede. Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Diom. I cannot Sir: I have important buſineſs.

Achill. Enter my Lords.

Ulyſſ. to Troil. Follow his torch: he goes to Calchas's tent.

[Exeunt Achill. Hect. Ajax at one way, Diomede, another; and after him Ulyſſ. Troylus.

Thers. This Diomede's a moſt falſe-hearted rogue, an unjuſt Knave: I will no more truſt him when he winks with one eye, then I will a Serpent when he hiſſes. He will ſpend his mouth and promiſe, like Brabbler the Hound: but when he performs, Aſtronomers ſet it down for a prodigy; Though I long to ſee Hector, I cannot forbear dogging him. They ſay a keeps a Trojan Drabb: and uſes Calchas tent, that fugitive Prieſt of Troy; that Canonical Rogue of our ſide. I'le after him: nothing but whoring in this Age: all incontinent Raſcalls! Exit Therſites.

Entere Calchas, Creſſida.

Calch. O, what a bleſſing is a vertuous child!
Thou haſt reclam'd my mind, and calm'd my paſſions
Of anger and revenge: my love to Troy
Revives within me, and my loſt Tyara
No more diſturbs my mind:

Creſs. A vertuous conqueſt.

Calch. I have a womans longing to return
But yet which way without your ayd I know not.

Creſs. Time muſt inſtruct us how.

Calch. You muſt diſſemble love to Diomede ſtill:
Falſe Diomede, bred in Ulyſſes School
Can never be deceiv'd,
But by ſtrong Arts and blandiſhments of love:
Put 'em in practice all; ſeem loſt and won,
And draw him on, and give him line again.
This Argus then may cloſe his hundred eyes
And leave our flight more eaſy.

Creſs. How can I anſwer this to love and Troilus?

Calch. Why 'tis for him you do it: promiſe largely;
That Ring he ſaw you wear, he much ſuſpects

Was given you by a Lover; let him have it.

Diom. within. Hoa; Calchas, Calchas!

Calch. Hark! I hear his voice.

Purſue your project: doubt not the ſucceſs.

Creſs. Heaven knows againſt my will: and yet my hopes
This night to meet my Triolus, while 'tis truce
Afford my minde ſome eaſe.

Calch. No more: retire. Exit Creſſida.

Enter Diomede; Troilus and Ulyſſes appear liſtening at one door, and Therſites watching at another.

Diom. I came to ſee your Daughter, worthy Calchas.

Calch. My Lord I'le call her to you. Exit Calchas.

Ulyſſes to Troil. Stand where the torch may not diſcover us.

Enter Creſſida.

Troil. Creſſida comes forth to him!

Diom. How now my charge?

Creſs. Now my ſweet Guardian: hark a word with you.

Whiſper.

Troil. I, ſo familiar!

Diom. Will you remember?

Creſs. Remember: yes.

Troil. Heav'ns! what ſhou'd ſhe remember! plague and madneſſe!

Ulyſſes. Prince, you are mov'd: let us depart in time
Leſt your diſpleaſure ſhould enlarge it ſelf
To wrathfull terms: this place is dangerous;
The time unfit: 'beſeech you let us go.

Troil. I pray you ſtay; by Hell, and by Hell torments
I will not ſpeak a word.

Diom. I'le hear no more: good night.

Creſs. Nay, but you part in anger!

Troil. Does that grieve thee! O wither'd truth!

Diom. Farewell Couſner.

Creſs. Indeed I am not: pray come back again.

Ulyſſ. You ſhake my Lord, at ſomething: will you go?
You will break out.

Troil. By all the Gods I will not.
There is between my will and all my actions,
A guard of patience! ſtay a little while.

Thers. aſide. How the devill luxury with his fat rump, and potato finger, tickles theſe together! put him off a little, you fooliſh Harlot! 'twill ſharpen him the more.

Diom. But will you then?

Creſſi. I will as ſoon as ere the War's concluded.

Diom. Give me some token, for the surety of it :
The Ring I saw you wear.

Cressi. Giving it. If you must have it.

Troil. The Ring! nay then 'tis plain! O beauty where's thy faith!

Ulyss. You have sworn patience.

Therst. That's well, that's well, the pledge is given, hold her to her word good Devil, and her soul's thine I warrant thee.

Diom. Who's wast?

Cressi. By all Diana's waiting train of stars,
And by her self, I will not tell you whose.

Diom. Why then thou lov'st him still, farewell for ever:
Thou never shalt mock Diomede again.

Cressi. You shall not go, one cannot speak a word
But straight it starts you.

Diom. I do not like this fooling.

Therst. Nor I by Pluto: but that which likes not me, pleases me best.

Diom. I shall expect your promise.

Cressi. I'le perform it.
Not a word more, good night——I hope for ever: [aside.
Thus to deceive deceivers is no fraud.

[Exeunt Diomede Cressida severally.

Ulyss. All's done my Lord.

Troil. Is it?

Ulyss. Pray let us go.

Troil. Was Cressida here?

Ulyss. I cannot conjure Trojan.

Troil. She was not sure! she was not.
Let it not be believ'd for womanhood:
Think we had Mothers, do not give advantage,
To biting Satyr, apt without a theme,
For defamation, to square all the sex
By Cressid's rule, rather think this not Cressida.

Therst. Will he swagger himself out on's own eyes!

Troil. This she! no this was Diomedes Cressida.
If beauty have a Soul, this is not she:
I cannot speak for rage, that Ring was mine,
By Heaven I gave it, in that point of time
When both our joys were fullest!——if he keeps it
Let dogs eat Troilus.

Therst. He'll tickle it for his Concupy: this will be sport to see! Patroclus will give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore; a parrot will not do more for an almond, than he will for a commodious drab: I would I cou'd meet with this Rogue Diomede too; I wou'd croke like a Raven to him; I wou'd bode: it shall go hard but I'le find him out. Exit Therstites.

Enter

Enter Æneas.

Æn. I have been seeking you this hour, my Lord :
Hector by this is arming him in Troy.

Ulyss. Commend me gallant Troilus to your Brother :
Tell him I hope he shall not need to arm :
The fair Polixena has by a letter
Disarm'd our great Achilles of his rage.

Troil. This I shall say to Hector.

Ulyss. So I hope!
Pray Heaven Thersites have inform'd me true,—— [aside.

Troil. Good night, my Lord ; accept distracted thanks.

[Exit Ulisses.

Enter Pandarus.

Pand. Hear ye, my Lord, hear ye ; I have been seeing yon poor girl. There have been old doings there i'faith.

Troil. aside. Hold yet, my Spirits ; let him powr it in :
The poyson's kind : the more I drink of it
The sooner 'twill dispatch me.

Æne. to Pand. Peace you babbler !

Pand. She has been mightily made on by the Greeks : she takes most wonderfully among 'em : Achilles kiss'd her, and Patroclus kiss'd her : Nay and old Nestor put aside his gray beard and brush'd her with his whiskers. Then comes me Aganemnon with his Generals Staff, diving with a low bow e'en to the ground, and rising again, just at her lips : And after him came Ulysses, and Ajax, and Menelaus : and they so pelted her i'faith : pitter patter, pitter patter, as thick as hayl-stones. And after that a whole rout of 'em : Never was woman in Phrygia better kiss'd.

Troil. aside. Hector said true : I finde, I finde it now !

Pand. And last of all comes me Diomede so demurely : that's a notable sly Rogue I warrant him ! mercy upon us, how he layd her on upon the lips ! for as I told you, she's most mightily made on among the Greekes. What, cheer up I say Man ! she has every ones good word. I think in my conscience, she was born with a caull upon her head.

Troil. aside. Hell, death, confusion, how he tortures me !

Pand. And that Rogue-priest my Brother, is so courted and treated for her sake : the young Sparks do so pull him about, and hall him by the Cassock : nothing but invitations to his Tent, and his Tent, and his Tent. Nay and one of 'em was so bold, as to ask him if she were a Virgin, and with that the Rogue my Brother, takes me up a little God in his hand, and kisses it ; and swears devoutly that she was, then was I ready to burst my sides with laughing, to think what had pass'd betwixt you two.

Troil. O I can bear no more : she's falshood all :
False by both kinds ; for with her mothers milk

She

She ſuck'd th'infuſion of her Fathers Soul.
She only wants an opportunity,
Her Soul's a whore already.

Pand. What wou'd you make a Monopoly of a womans lips: a little conſolation or ſo, might be allow'd one wou'd think in a lovers abſence!

Troil. Hence from my ſight: let ignominy brand thy hated name:
Let Modeſt Matrons at thy mention ſtart;
And bluſhing Virgins, when they read our Annals,
Skip o're the guilty page that holds thy Legend,
And blots the noble work.

Pand. O world, world; thou art an ungratefull patch of Earth! Thus the poor Agent is deſpis'd! he labours painfully in his calling, and trudges between parties: but when their turns are ſerv'd, come out's too good for him. I am mighty melancholy: I'le e'en go home, and ſhut up my doors; and dye o'th ſullens like an old bird in a Cage!

Exit Pandarus.

Enter Diomede and Therſites.

Thers. aſide. There; there he is: now let it work: now play thy part jealouſy, and twinge e'm: put 'em between thy milſtones, and grinde the Rogues together.

Diom. My Lord I am by Ajax ſent to inform you
This hour muſt end the truce.

Æneas to Troil. Contain your ſelf;
Think where we are.

Diom. Your ſtay will be unſafe.

Troil It may for thoſe I hate.

Therſ. aſide. Well ſaid Trojan: there's the firſt hit.

Diom. Beſeech you Sir make haſte, my own affairs
Call me another way.

Thers. aſide. What affairs; what affairs; demand that, Dolthead! the Rogue will loſe a quarrell for want of wit to ask that queſtion.

Troil. May I enquire where your affairs conduct you?

Thers. aſide. Well ſayd again; I beg thy pardon.

Diom. Oh, it concerns you not.

Troil. Perhaps it does.

Diom. You are too inquiſitive: nor am I bound
To ſatisfy an Enemies requeſt.

Troil. You have a Ring upon your finger Diomede,
And given you by a Lady,

Diom. If it were; 'Twas given to one who can defend her gift.

Thers. aſide. So, ſo; the boars begin to gruntle at one another: ſet up your briſtles now a'both ſides: whet and foam Rogues.

Troil. You muſt reſtore it Greek, by Heaven you muſt:
No ſpoil of mine ſhall grace a Traitors hand.

And,

And, with it, give me back the broken vows
Of my falſe fair; which, perjur'd as ſhe is,
I never will reſigne, but with my Soul.

Diom. Then thou it ſeems art that forſaken fool
Who wanting merit to preſerve her heart,
Repines in vain to ſee it better plac'd;
But know, (for now I take a pride to grieve thee)
Thou art ſo loſt a thing in her eſteem
I never heard thee nam'd; but ſome ſcorn follow'd:
Thou wert our table talk for laughing meals:
Thy name our ſportful theme for Evening walks:
And intermiſſive hours of cooler Love:
When hand in hand we went. [Troil.] Hell and furies!

Therſi. Aſide. O well ſtung Scorpion!
Now Menelaus his Greek horns are out o' doors, there's a new Cuckold ſtart up on the Trojan ſide.

Troil. Yet this was ſhe, ye Gods that very ſhe,
Who in my arms lay melting all the Night;
Who kiſs'd and ſigh'd, and ſigh'd, and kiſs'd again,
As if her Soul flew upward to her lips,
To meet mine there, and panted at the paſſage.
Who loath to finde the breaking day, look'd out,
And ſhrunk into my boſome, there to make
A little longer darkneſs.

Diom. Plagues and tortures!

Therſi. Good, good, by Pluto! their fool's mad to loſe his harlot; and our fools mad, that tother fool had her firſt: if ſought peace now, I cou'd tell 'em there's punk enough to ſatisfie 'em both: whore ſufficient! but let 'em worry one another, the fooliſh currs; they think they can never have enough of carrion.

Æneas. My Lords, this fury is not proper here,
In time of truce; if either ſide be injur'd
To morrow's Sun will riſe apace, and then——

Troil. And then! but why ſhould I defer till then?
My blood calls now, there is no truce for Traytors.
My vengeance rowls within my breaſt, it muſt
It will have vent.—— [Draws.

Diom Hinder us not Æneas,
My blood rides high as his, I truſt thy honour;
And know thou art too brave a foe to break it.—— [Draws.

Therſi. Now Moon! now ſhine ſweet Moon! let 'em have juſt light enough to make their paſſes: and not light enough to ward 'em.

Æne. Drawing too. By Heav'n he comes on this who ſtrikes the firſt,
You both are mad, is this like gallant men
To fight at midnight; at the Murderers hour?

When

When only guilt and rapine draws a Sword ?
Let night enjoy her dues of ſoft repoſe ;
But let the Sun behold the brave mans courage.
And this I dare engage for Diomede
Foe though I am, he ſhall not hide his head,
But meet you in the very face of danger.

Diom. putting up. Be't ſo: and were it on ſome precipice
High as Olympus, and a Sea beneath
Call when thou dar'ſt, juſt on the ſharpeſt point
I'le meet, and tumble with thee to deſtruction.

Troil. A gnawing conſcience haunts not guilty men
As I'le haunt thee, to ſummon thee to this,
Nay, ſhould'ſt thou take the Stygian lake for refuge
I'le plunge in after, through the boiling flames
To puſh thee hiſſing down the vaſt Abyſſe.

Diom. Where ſhall we meet ?

Troil. Before the Tent of Calchas :
Thither, through all your Troops, I'le fight my way ;
And in the ſight of perjur'd Creſſida
Give death to her through thee.

Diom. Tis largely promis'd.
But I diſdain to anſwer with a boaſt ;
Be ſure thou ſhalt be met.

Troil. And thou be found. [Exeunt Troilus, Æneas, one way : Diomede the other.

Thers. Now the furies take Æneas, for letting 'em ſleep upon their quarrell : who knows but reſt may cool their brains, and make 'em riſe maukiſh to mischief upon conſideration ? May each of 'em dream he ſees his Cockatrice in to'thers arms : and be ſtabbing one another in their ſleep, to remember 'em of their buſineſs when they wake : let 'em be punctual to the point of honour ; and if it were poſſible let both be firſt at the place of Execution. Let neither of 'em have cogitation enough, to conſider 'tis a whore they fight for : and let 'em vallue their lives at as little as they are worth. And laſtly let no ſucceeding fools take warning by 'em ; but in imitation of them when a Strumpet is in queſtion,

Let 'em beneath thair feet all reaſon trample ;
And think it great to periſh by Example. Exit.

ACT.

ACT V. SCENE I.

Hector, Trojans, Andromache.

Hect. THe blew mists rise from off the nether grounds,
And the Sun mounts apace: to arms, to arms:
I am resolv'd to put to th' utmost proof
The fate of Troy this day.

Andro. aside. Oh, wretched woman, oh!

Hect. Methought I heard you sigh, Andromache!

Andro. Did you my Lord?

Hect. Did you my Lord? you answer indirectly,
Just when I sayd that I wou'd put our fate
Upon th'extreamest proof, you fetch'd a groan;
And, as you check'd your self, for what you did
You stifl'd it, and stopt. Come you are sad.

Andro. The Gods forbid.

Hect. What should the Gods forbid?

Andro. That I shou'd give you cause of just offence.

Hect. You say well: but you look not cheerfully.
I mean this day to waste the stock of war,
And lay it prodigally out in blows:
Come gird my sword, and smile upon me, love;
Like victory come flying to my arms;
And give me earnest of desir'd successe.

Andro. The Gods protect you; and restore you to me.

Hect. What, grown a Coward! thou wert us'd, Andromache,
To give my courage, courage: thou woudst cry
Go Hector; day grow's old; and part of Fame
Is ravish'd from thee, by thy sloathfull stay.

Andro. aside. What shall I do, to seem the same I was!
Come let me gird thy fortune to thy side:
And conquest sit as close, and sure as this.

[She goes to gird his Sword; and it falls.]

Now mercy, Heaven! the Gods avert this omen!

Hect. A foolish omen! take it up again;
And mend thy errour.

Andro. I cannot: for my hand obeys me not.
But as in slumbers, when we fain wou'd run
From our imagin'd fears, our idle feet
Grow to the ground, our struggling voice dyes inward,
So now, when I wou'd force my self to chear you
My faltring tongue can give no glad presage;
Alas, I am no more Andromache.

Hect. Why then thy former Soul is flown to me:
For I, me thinks, am lifted into ayr:
As if my mind, maſtring my mortal part
Wou'd bear my exalted body to the Gods.
Laſt night I dreamt Jove ſate on Ida's top
And beckning with his hand divine from far,
He pointed to a quire of Demi-gods,
Bacchus, and Hercules, and all the reſt
Who free from humane toils had gain'd the pitch
Of bleſt eternity: lo there he ſayd;
Lo there's a place for Hector.

Andro. Be to thy Enemies this boding dream!

Hect. Why it portends me honour and renoun.

Andro. Such honour, as the Brave gain after death.
For I have dreamt all night of horrid ſlaughters,
Of trampling horſes, and of Charriot wheels
Wading in blood up to their Axeltrees.
Of fiery Demons gliding down the Skyes,
And Ilium brighten'd with a midnight blaze;
O therefore, if thou lov'ſt me, go not forth.

Hect. Go to thy bed again; and there dream better.
Ho bid my Trumpet Sound.

Andro. No notes of ſally for the Heaven's ſweet ſake.
Tis not for nothing when my Spirits droop:
This is a day when thy ill Starrs are ſtrong
When they have driv'n thy helpleſs genius down
The ſteep of Heaven to ſome obſcure retreat.

Hect. No more; ev'n as thou lov'ſt my fame no more:
My honour ſtands ingag'd to meet Achilles:
What will the Grecians think; or what will he,
Or what will Troy; or what wilt thou thy ſelf
When once this ague fit of fear is ore;
If I ſhould loſe my honour for a dream.

Andro. Your Enemies too well your courage know,
And Heaven abhorrs the forfiet of raſh vows
Like ſpotted livers in a Sacrifice.
I cannot; O I dare not let you go:
For when you leave me, my preſaging minde
Says, I ſhall never, never ſee you more.

Hect. Thou excellently good, but oh too ſoft,
Let me not ſcape the danger of this day,
But I have ſtruggling in my manly Soul
To ſee thoſe modeſt tears, aſham'd to fall,
And witneſs any part of woman in thee!
And now I fear, leſt thou ſhould'ſt think it fear,

If thus diſſwaded, I refuſe to fight,
And ſtay inglorious in thy arms at home.

Andro. Oh cou'd I have that thought I ſhou'd not love thee;
Thy Soul is proof to all things but to kindneſs.
And therefore t'was that I forbore to tell thee
How mad Caſſandra, full of prophecy
Ran round the ſtreets, and like a Bacchanal
Cry'd hold him Priam, 'tis an ominous day,
Let him not go; for Hector is no more.

Hect. Our life is ſhort but to extend that ſpan
To vaſt Eternity is virtues work.
Therefore to thee, and not to fear of fate
Which once muſt come to all, give I this day
But ſee thou move no more the like requeſt:
For reſt aſſur'd that to regain this hour
To morrow will I tempt a double danger:
Mean time, let Deſtiny attend thy leiſure.
I reckon this one day a blank of life.

Enter Troilus.

Troil. Where are you Brother? now in honour's name,
What do you mean to be thus long unarm'd?
Th' imbattel'd Souldiers throug about the gates:
The Matrous to the turrets tops aſcend
Holding their helpleſſe children in their arms,
To make you early known to their young eyes,
And Hector is the univerſal ſhout.

Hect. Bid all unarm, I will not fight to day.

Troil. Employ ſome coward to bear back this news,
And let the children hoot him for his pains;
By all the gods and by my juſt revenge,
This Sun ſhall ſhine the laſt for them or us:
Theſe noiſy ſtreets or yonder ecchoing plains
Shall be to morrow ſilent as the grave.

Andro. O Brother do not urge a brothers fate,
But let this rack of heav'n and earth rowl o're,
And when the ſtorm is paſt put out to ſea.

Troil. Oh now I know from whence his change proceeds,
Some frantick Augur has obſerv'd the skyes;
Some victim wants a heart, or crow flys wrong;
By heav'n 'twas never well ſince ſawcy Prieſts
Grew to be Maſters of the liſtning herd;
And into Miters cleft the Regal Crown.
Then as the Earth were ſcanty for their pow'r,
They drew the pomp of Heav'n to wait on them;
Shall I go publiſh Hector dares not fight

Becauſe a mad-man dreamt he talk'd with Jove?
What cou'd the God ſee in a brain-ſick Prieſt
That he ſhould ſooner talk to him then me?

Hect. You know my name's not liable to fear.

Troil. Yes, to the worſt of fear, to ſuperſtition.
But whether that or fondneſſe of a wife,
(The more unpardonable ill) has ſeiz'd you,
Know this, the Grecians think you fear Achilles,
And that Polixena has beg'd your life.

Hect. How! that my life is beg'd, and by my ſiſter?

Troil. Ulyſſes ſo inform'd me at our parting,
With a malicious and diſdainfull ſmile:
'Tis true, he ſaid not in broad words you fear'd,
But in well-manner'd terms 'twas ſo agreed
Achilles ſhou'd avoid to meet with Hector.

Hect. He thinks my Siſters treaſon, my petition,
That largely vaunting in my heat of bloud
More then I cou'd, it ſeems, or durſt perform,
I ſought evaſion.

Troil. And in private pray'd.

Hect. O yes, Polixena, to beg my life.

Andro. He cannot think ſo, do not urge him thus.

Hect. Not urge me! then thou think'ſt I need his urging.
By all the Gods ſhou'd Jove himſelf deſcend,
And tell me Hector thou deſerv'ſt not life
But take it as a boon; I wou'd not live.
But that a Mortal man, and he of all men
Shou'd think my life were in his power to give,
I will not reſt, till proſtrate on the ground
I make him Athieſt-like, implore his breath
Of me and not of Heaven.

Troil. Then you'l refuſe no more to fight.

Hect. Refuſe! I'le not be hinder'd, Brother.
I'le through and through 'em, ev'n their hindmoſt ranks
Till I have found that large ſiz'd boaſting fool
Who dare preſume my life is in his gift.

Andro. Farewell, farewell: 'tis vain to ſtrive with fate!
Caſſandra's raging God inſpires my breaſt,
With truths that muſt be told and not believ'd.
Look how he dyes! look how his eye turns pale!
Look how his blood burſts out at many vents!
Hark how Troy roars, how Hecuba crys out
And widow'd I fill all the ſtreets with ſcreams!
Behold diſtraction, frenzy and amazement,

Like

Like Antiques meet, and tumble upon heaps!
And all cry Hector; Hectors dead! Oh Hector!

[Exit Andromache.

Hect. What sport will be when we return at Evening,
To laugh her out of count'nance for her dreams!
Troil. I have not quench'd my eyes with dewy sleep this Night;
But fiery fumes mount upward to my brains,
And when I breathe, methinks my nostrills hiss!
I shall turn Basilisk! and with my sight
Do my hands work, on Diomede this day.
Hect. To Arms, to Arms, the vantguards are ingag'd:
Let us not leave one Man to guard the Walls,
Both Old and young, the coward and the brave,
Be Summond all, our utmost fate to try;
And as one body move, whose Soul am I. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The Camp.

Alarm within. Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Menelaus, Souldiers.

Agam. THus far the promise of the day is fair:
Æneas rather loses ground than gains,
I saw him overlabour'd, taking breath;
And leaning on his spear, behold our Trenches
Like a fierce Lyon looking up to toyls,
Which yet he durst not leap.
Ulyss. And therefore distant death does all the work:
The flights of whistling darts make brown the sky,
Whose clashing points strike fire, and guild the dusk:
Those that reach home, from neither host are vain,
So thick the preasse; so lusty are their arms,
That death seem'd never sent with better will!
Nor was with less concernment entertain'd.

Enter Nestor.

Agam. Now Nestor, what's the news?
Nestor. I have descry'd,
A clow'd of dust that mounts in pillars upwards;
Expanding as it travells to our Camp,
And from the midst I heard a bursting showt,
That rent the Heavens! as if all Troy were swarm'd,
And on the wing this way.
Menel. Let 'em come, let 'em come.
Agam. Where's great Achilles!

Nest.

Ulyſſ. Think not on Achilles:
Till Hector drag him from his Tent to fight,
(Which ſure he will, for I have laid the train.)
Neſt. But young Patroclus leads his Myrmydons;
And in their front, ev'n in the face of Hector,
Reſolves to dare the Trojans.
Agam. Haſte Ulyſſes, bid Ajax iſſue forth, and ſecond him.
Ulyſſ. Oh Noble General, let it not be ſo.
Oppoſe not rage, while rage is in its force;
But give it way awhile; and let it waſte:
The riſing deluge is not ſtopt with dams,
Thoſe it orebears, and drowns the hopes of harveſt.
But wiſely manag'd its divided ſtrength
Is ſluc'd in channels, and ſecurely drain'd:
Firſt, let ſmall parties dally with their fury.
But when their force is ſpent and unſupply'd
The reſidue with mounds may be reſtrain'd,
And dry-ſhod, we may paſs the naked ford.

Enter Therſites.

Thers. Ho, ho, ho!
Menel. Why doſt thou laugh, unſeaſonable fool!
Thers. Why thou fool in ſeaſon, cannot a man laugh, but thou think'ſt he makes horns at thee! Thou Prince of the Herd, what haſt thou to do with laughing! Tis the prerogative of man to laugh! Thou Riſibility without Reaſon: thou ſubject of laughter; Thou fool Royall:
Ulyſſ. But tell us the occaſion of thy mirth?
Thers. Now a man asks me, I care not if I anſwer to my own kinde: why the Enemies are broken into our Trenches: Fools like Menelaus fall by thouſands; yet not a humane Soul departs on either ſide. Troilus and Ajax have almoſt beaten one anothers heads off; but are both immortal for want of brains. Patroclus has kill'd Sarpedon; and Hector Patroclus: So there's a towardly ſpringing fop gone off: He might have made a Prince one day: But now he's nipt in the very budd and promiſe of a moſt prodigious Coxcomb.
Agam. Bear off Patroclus body to Achilles:
Revenge will arm him now, and bring us ayd.
Th' alarm Sounds near; and ſhouts are driv'n upon us,
As of a crowd confus'd in their retreat.
Ulyſſ. Open your Ranks, and make theſe mad men way:
Then cloſe again, to charge upon their backs:
And quite conſume the Reliques of the warr.

[Exeunt all but Therſites.

Thers. What ſhoales of fools one battle ſweeps away!
How it purges families of younger Brothers! Highways of Robbers,

and

and Cities of Cuckold-makers! There's nothing like a pitch'd Battle, for these brisk Addle-heads! Your Physitian is a pretty fellow; but his fees make him tedious; he rids not fast enough; the fools grow upon him, and their horse bodies are poyson proof. Your Pestilence is a quicker Remedy; but it has not the grace to make distinction; it huddles up honest men and Rogues together. But your battle has discretion; it picks out all the forward fools. And sowses 'em together into Immortality.

[Shouts and alarm within.

Plague upon these drums and Trumpets! these sharp sawces of the War, to get fools an Appetite to fighting! what do I among 'em? I shall be mistaken for some valiant Asse, and dye a Martyr, in a wrong Religion!

Here Grecians fly over the stage, pursued by Trojans: One Trojan turns back upon Thersites who is flying too.

Trojan. Turn slave and fight.

Troj. A Bastard Son of Priam's.

Thers. I am a Bastard too: I love Bastards: I am Bastard in body, Bastard in minde, Bastard in valour; in every thing illegitimate. A Bear will not fasten upon a Bear; why should one Bastard offend another! let us part fair, like true Sons of Whores; and have the fear of our Mothers before our eyes.

Troj. The Devil take thee Coward. Exit Trojan

Thers. Now wou'd I were either Invisible, or invulnerable? these Gods have a fine time on't; they can see and make mischief, and never feel it.

[Clattring of swords at both doors; he runs each way, and meets the noise.

A pox clatter you; I am compass'd in! Now wou'd I were that blockhead Ajax for a minute: some sturdy Trojan will poach me up with a long pole! and then the Rogues may kill one another upon free cost, and have no body left to laugh at 'em:
Now Destruction! now Destruction!

Enter Hector and Troilus driving in the Greeks.

Hect. to Ther. Speak what part thou fightst on!

Thers. I fight not at all: I am for neither side.

Hect. Thou art a Greek: art thou a match for Hector.
Art thou of blood and honour?

Thers. No, I am a rascall: a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy Rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee; live.

Thers. God a mercy, that thou wilt believe me: but the Devil break thy neck for frighting me: [aside.

Troilus

Troilus returning. What Prisoner have you there?

Hect. A gleaning of the war: a Rogue he says.

Troil. Dispatch him and away. [going to kill him.

Thers. Hold, hold: what is't no more but dispatch a man and away! I am in no such hast: I will not dye for Greece; I hate Greece, and by my good will wou'd nere have been born there; I was mistaken into that Country, and betray'd by my parents to be born there. And besides I have a mortal Enemy amongst the Grecians, one Diomede a damned villain, and cannot dye with a safe conscience till I have first murther'd him.

Troil. Shew me thrt Diomede and thou shalt live.

Therf. Come along with me and I'le conduct thee to Calchas his Tent, where I believe he's now making warre with the Priests daughter.

Hect. Here we must part, our destinies divide us;
Brother and friend, farewell.

Troil. When shall we meet?

Hect. When the Gods please: if not, we once must part.
Look; on yon hill their squander'd Troops unite;

Troil. If I mistake not, 'tis their last Reserve:
The storm's blown ore; and those but after drops.

Hect. I wish our Men be not too far ingag'd:
For few we are and spent; as having born
The burden of the Day: but hap what can
They shall be charg'd: Achilles must be there;
And him I seek, or death.
Divide our Troops; and take the fresher half.

Troil. O Brother,

Hect. No dispute of Ceremony!
These are enow for me; in faith enow:
There bodies shall not flag while I can lead;
Nor wearied limbs confess mortality,
Before those Ants that blacken all yon hill
Are crept into their Earth: Farewell. Exit Hector.

Troil. Farewell; come Greek:

Therf. Now these Rival-rogues will clapperclaw one another, and I shall have the sport on't. Exit Troil. with Therstes.

Enter Achilles and Myrmidons.

Achil. Which way went Hector?

Myrmyd. Up yon sandy hill:
You may discern 'em by their smoaking track;
A wavering body working with bent hams
Against the rising, spent with painfull march,
And by loose-footing cast on heaps together.

Achil.

Achill. O thou art gone! thou ſweeteſt, beſt of friends;
Why did I let thee tempt the ſhock of war
Ere yet thy tender nerves had ſtrung thy limbs,
And knotted into ſtrength. Yet, though too late,
I will, I will revenge the, my Patroclus!
Nor ſhall thy Ghoſt thy Murtherer's long attend,
But thou ſhalt hear him calling Charon back,
Ere thou art wafted to the farther ſhore.
Make haſt, my Soldiers: give me this days pains.
For my dead friend: ſtrike every hand with mine,
Till Hector breathleſs, on the ground we lay!
Revenge is honour, the ſecureſt way. Exit with Myrmidons.

[Enter Therſites, Troilus, Trojans.

Thers. That's Calcha's tent.

Troil. Then that one ſpot of Earth contains more falſhood
Than all the Sun ſees in his race beſide.
That I ſhou'd truſt the Daughter of a Prieſt!
Prieſthood, that makes a Merchandiſe of Heaven!
Prieſthood that ſells eve'n to their prayr's and bleſſings!
And forces us to pay for our own couſnage!

Thers. Nay cheats Heav'n too with entrails and with offals;
Gives it the garbidge of a Sacrifice
And keeps the beſt for private Luxury.

Troil. Thou haſt deſerv'd thy life, for curſing Prieſts:
Let me embrace thee; thou art beautifull:
That back, that noſe; thoſe eyes are beautiful:
Live, thou art honeſt; for thou hat'ſt a Prieſt.

Thers. aſide. Farewell Trojan; if I ſcape with life, as I hope; and thou art knock'd o'th head, as I hope too; I ſhall be the firſt that ever ſcap'd the revenge of a Prieſt, after curſing him; and thou wilt not be the laſt, I Prophecy that a Prieſt will bring to ruin. [Exit Ther.

Troil. Me thinks my ſoul is rowz'd to her laſt work:
Has much to do, and little time to ſpare.
She ſtarts within me, like a Traveller
Who ſluggiſhly out-ſlept his morning hour
And mends his pace, to reach his Inn betimes.

Noiſe within, follow, follow.

A Noiſe of Arms! the Traitor may be there:
Or elſe, perhaps, that conſcious ſcene of Love,
The Tent may hold him, yet I dare not ſearch
For oh I fear to find him in that place. [Exit. Troilus.

Enter Calchas, Creſſida.

Ceeſſ. Where is he? I'le be juſtify'd or dye.

Calch. So quickly vaniſh'd! he was here but now:
He muſt be gone to ſearch for Diomede,
For Diomede told me, here they were to fight.
Creſſ. Alas! (Calch.) you muſt prevent, and not complain.
Creſſ. If Troilus dye, I have no ſhare in life.
Calch. If Diomede ſink beneath the ſword of Troilus,
We loſe not only a Protector here,
But are debard all future means of flight.
Creſſi. What then remains!
Calch. To interpoſe betimes
Betwixt their ſwords; or if that cannot be
To intercede for him, who ſhall be vanquiſh'd,
Fate leaves no middle courſe.—— Exit. Calchas.

Claſhing within.

Creſſi. Ah me I hear e'm;
And fear 'tis paſt prevention.
Enter Diomede, retiring before Troilus, and falling as he enters.
Troil. Now beg thy life, or dye.
Diom. No: uſe thy fortune:
I loath the life, which thou canſt give, or take.
Troil. Scornſt thou my mercy villain!——take thy wiſh.——
Creſſi. Hold, hold your hand my Lord, and hear me ſpeak.

Troilus turns back: in which time Diomede riſes: Trojans and Greeks enter, and rank themſelves on both ſides of their Captains.

Troil. Did I not hear the voice of perjur'd Creſſida?
Com'ſt thou to give the laſt ſtab to my heart?
As if the proofs of all thy former falſhood
Were not enough convincing, com'ſt thou now
To beg my Rivals life!
Whom, oh, if any ſpark of truth remain'd,
Thou coud'ſt not thus, ev'n to my face prefer!
Creſſ. What ſhall I ſay! that you ſuſpect me falſe
Has ſtruck me dumb! but let him live my Troilus,
By all our loves, by all our paſt endearments
I do adjure thee ſpare him.
Troil. Hell, and death!
Creſſi. If ever I had pow'r to bend your mind,
Believe me ſtill your faithful Creſſida:
And though my innocence appear like guilt,
Becauſe I make his forfeit life my ſuit,
'Tis but for this, that my return to you
Wou'd be cut off for ever by his death.
My father, treated like a ſlave and ſcorn'd,

My ſelf in hated bonds a Captive held.
Troil. Cou'd I believe thee, cou'd I think thee true
In triumph wou'd I bear thee back to Troy,
Though Greece could rally all her ſhatter'd troops,
And ſtand embatteld to oppoſe my way.
But, Oh, thou Syren, I will ſtop my ears
To thy enchanting notes; the winds ſhall bear
Upon their wings, thy words more light then they.
Creſſi. Alaſs I but diſſembled love to him;
If ever he had any proof beyond
What modeſty might give.——
Diom. No! witneſſe this——(the Ring ſhown.)
There, take her Trojan; thou deſerv'ſt her beſt,
You good, kind-natur'd, well-believing fools
Are treaſures to a woman.
I was a jealous, hard vexatious Lover
And doubted ev'n this pledge till full poſſeſſion:
But ſhe was honourable to her word;
And I have no juſt reaſon to complain.
Creſſi. O, unexampled, frontleſſe impudence!
Troil. Hell ſhow me ſuch another tortur'd wretch, as Troilus!
Diom. Nay, grieve not: I reſigne her freely up:
I'm ſatisfi'd: and dare engage for Creſſida,
That if you have a promiſe of her perſon,
She ſhall be willing to come out of debt.
Creſſi. [kneeling.] My only Lord: by all thoſe holy vows
Which if there be a pow'r above are binding,
Or, if there be a Hell below, are fearful,
May every imprecation, which your rage
Can wiſh on me, take place, if I am falſe.
Diom. Nay, ſince you're ſo concern'd to be believ'd,
I'm ſorry I have preſs'd my charge ſo far;
Be what you wou'd be thought: I can be grateful.
Troil. Grateful! Oh torment! now hells bleweſt flames
Receive her quick; with all her crimes upon her.
Let her ſink ſpotted down. Let the dark hoſt
Make room; and point: and hiſſe her, as ſhe goes.
Let the moſt branded Ghoſts of all her Sex
Rejoyce, and cry, here comes a blacker fiend.
Let her——
Creſſi. Enough my Lord; you've ſaid enough:
This faithleſſe, perjur'd, hated Creſſida,
Shall be no more, the ſubject of your Curſes:
Some few hours hence, and grief had done your work;
But then your eyes had miſs'd the Satisfaction

The Epilogue.

Spoken by Therſites.

THeſe cruel Critiques put me into paſſion;
For in their lowring looks I reade damnation:
Ye expect a Satyr, and I ſeldom fail,
When I'm firſt beaten, 'tis my part to rail.
You Britiſh fools, of the Old Trojan ſtock,
That ſtand ſo thick one cannot miſs the flock,
Poets have cauſe to dread a keeping Pit,
When Womens Cullyes come to judge of Wit.
As we ſtrow Rats-bane when we vermine fear,
'Twere worth our coſt to ſcatter fool-bane here.
And after all our judging Fops were ſerv'd,
Dull Poets too ſhou'd have a doſe reſerv'd,
Such Reprobates, as paſt all ſence of ſhaming
Write on, and nere are ſatisfy'd with damming,
Next, thoſe, to whom the Stage does not belong
Such whoſe Vocation onely is to Song;
At moſt to Prologue, when for want of time
Poets take in for Journywork in Rhime.
But I want curſes for thoſe mighty ſhoales,
Of ſcribling Chloriſſes, and Phillis fools,
Thoſe Ophs ſhou'd be reſtraind, during their lives,
From Pen and Ink, as Madmen are from knives:
I cou'd rayl on, but 'twere a task as vain
As Preaching truth at Rome, or wit in Spain,
Yet to huff out our Play was worth my trying,
John Lilbourn ſcap'd his Judges by defying:
If guilty, yet I'm ſure oth' Churches bleſſing,
By ſuffering for the Plot, without confeſſing.
